The Down Factory Store

www.downfactorystore.com

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

METAL BED SALE

"We go the distance for you."
Comforters

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breathe, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

The Peddler Of Bellport

Isabella Rossellini, The Hotel In The Ozone Layer And Other Stories

By Dan Rattiner

I would like to talk about how difficult it is to get everything right in every edition of this newspaper every week. There are often 150 or even 200 pages of little tiny letters and words to be read over and proof-read for accuracy every Tuesday night. I once ordered an intern to count them. He stopped at half a million.

It is very hard to get every one of these little letters right. In particular, I'd like to call your attention to the issue of this past week, July 13, which contained two very major errors and one almost error that would, had we not caught it in time, have trashed the reputation of actress Isabella Rossellini.

First, about Isabella.

Isabella Rossellini has become a beloved figure in the small, quiet east end village of Bellport, just to the west of the Hamptons. She does not drive a car and is often seen on her bicycle around town. There's lots of people with bicycles in Bellport, many of them with wicker baskets between the handle bars for taking things back and forth between town and home.

came back, still, as "peddling." I fixed it a second time and once again it came back wrong. There was poor Isabella, still rattling the coins around as she wandered the streets of Bellport. What could have caused it?

I would like to comment on how difficult it is to get everything right in every edition of this newspaper every week.

---

It occurred to me it must be that damn Microsoft Paperclip person who comes up on your computer screen when you write a letter. He's jabbering away. He can format your margins. He can fix your spelling. But "peddling" does not get corrected when you ask him to do so. Peddling is still a correctly spelled word.

I have often thought there ought to be a little icon on the screen of a small firearm. You left click on a firearm and it points itself at Mr. Paperclip. You right click on the firearm, it goes bang, and Mr. Paperclip falls over dead. But no. They haven't come up with that yet.

Anyway, totally frustrated, I changed Isabella's peddling to pedaling a THIRD time and this time

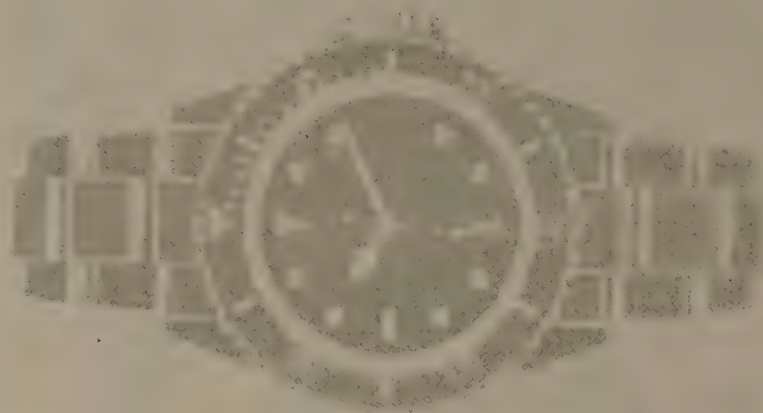

"Isabella is one of the honorary board members of the brand new Bellport Film Society," our reporter wrote. "She often is seen peddling her way through town."

It was after midnight Tuesday night when I got to this. Peddling is done with a tin cup. I submitted it back to production to correct it to "pedaling." It

South O' the Highway (and North, too)

Walter Isaacson, who in his spare time plays softball at the Artist-Writers Game in East Hampton (upcoming next month) has a real time job in the media where he also keeps hitting home runs. After a three year stint as editorial director of Time magazine, he has been hired as head of CNN. This is well deserved. Anyone who saw what he did at Time could see the difference. Now a new job deserves a celebration. And so there was one at the home of Tina Brown and author Harry Evans the other day. It was a fundraiser and Governor Pataki and his wife Libby were the honorees. But the literati came to congratulate Isaacson on a job well done, and so they did, in the garden, Ken Auletta, Barbara Walters, Peter Jennings, Howard Rubinstein, Calvin Butts, Mort Zuckerman, David Westin, Roger Ailes, Frank Rich and many others. Also on hand was AOL Time Warner's Gerald Levin, who interrupted his vacation in Turkey where he had been the guest of Atlantic Records' legend Ahmet Ertegun and his wife Mica. They were in Bodrum.

Luly Duke, fresh from the spectacular fireworks display held at her home in East Hampton last week to benefit Boys and Girls Harbor headed up by her husband Tony, is to be the honorary chair for The Latin Wave, a party to benefit SOLA, the Latin American Outreach Center. Joining as honorary chairs with her are Diana Weir and Giles Serran-Pagan. The event will take place at Riccardos' Seafood House in East Hampton, 1 to 4 p.m. on July 29. See you there.

Southampton's Wilbur Ross was the proud host at the opening of the offices of his new firm, WL Ross Co. LLC on East 52nd Street last week. There was a great turnout of his many friends. The office, a full floor, is also beautifully turned out, with paintings and statuary in the lobby, mostly from the Orient, where he does much of his investment business. On the other hand, by the elevator is the huge sculpture, full size, of a bull. He went to Wall Street for that one.

Eastport's John Adam Kanas, who is Chairman of the North Fork Bancorporation, happily released very excellent figures for this year's second quarter. Speaking on the record in Melville last week, he reported earnings of $78.2 million, up from $73.5 million. What hard times? "As expected, the company continues to benefit from the strong deposit growth trends and loan demand," he said.

An event called Bow Wow Brazil is setting up to be a very monster event this summer in the Hamptons. Among those heading up this rescue for the Animal Rescue Fund are Jimmy Buffet and Billy Joel, Chuck and Ellen Scarborough and Martha Stewart (who has four Chow dogs and six cats.) The event lets out its first bark early in the evening of August 18.

GIVE YOUR CHILD A HEALTHY SMILE

Many parents don't realize how early dental problems can occur, or just how important those "baby teeth" are!

Prolonged and frequent bottle or breast feeding can cause baby bottle tooth decay. Diets high in sugar from fruit roll-ups, sticky candies, juice and soda can also cause lots of cavities. Thumb and pacifier habits can cause malformations of the palate.

Children are not done losing their baby teeth until they are 12-13 years old! These teeth hold the spaces for permanent teeth, shape your child's face, and help with speech, eating and chewing.

Dr. Nancy Cosenza specializes in dentistry for children from infancy to their teenage years. At Hampton Pediatric Dental Associates, we know that not only children, but their teeth, are entirely different from adults. In fact, pediatric dentists require 2 years' additional training and education beyond dental school!

(There are only 5,000 pediatric dentists in the U.S., and we're the only pediatric dental practice in the Hamptons!)

Dr. Janet Stoess-Allen, our orthodontist, believes in early orthodontic intervention for those children who will clearly benefit from it. Early treatment presents the opportunity to influence jaw growth in a positive manner, lower risk of trauma to protruded upper incisors, correct harmful oral habits, and improve esthetics and self-esteem!

Our office is colorfully painted and cheerfully designed - a definite "kid-friendly" environment. Our staff is genuinely warm and cheerful too!

Call us at (631) 287-8687 if you have any questions or would like to arrange an appointment.

Remember that good dental habits and experiences started in childhood will last a lifetime! We know how to make kids leave the dentist's chair smiling — and their parents, too!

Theatre of Absurd “Produces” Diminished Society

I, a native New Yorker, recently walked out, in pain and dismay, in the middle of a performance of “The Producers”. Even though I understood the dramatic premise of the show, I was horrified by the trivialization of Adolph Hitler, Nazi uniforms and swastikas.

Mel Brooks and many audience members have suggested that depicting Hitler as a funny character somehow diminishes his stature.

But it simply is not possible to separate Hitler from the destruction he caused and I cannot find humor in a man who was responsible for torturing and murdering millions of innocent people, including one and a half million Jewish children.

The laughter, then, that such a show provokes is a troubling sign that society may be losing its sensitivity to what Hitler represents. It sickens me that the swastika, symbol to the world of the most contemptible form of human degradation, has been transformed into a symbol of popular entertainment.

Laughter may sometimes be the “best medicine”, but it becomes poison when it desecrates the memory of millions who were brutally slaughtered.

FROM ALAIN SENDERENS

Alain Senderens, the renowned chef of Paris' famed restaurant Lucas Carton, explains: "In 1993, when I met my good friend Paul-Francois Vranken, I asked him to create a special cuvée of Champagne that I would be proud to serve to the guests of Lucas Carton. After much research M. Vranken created Champagne Demoiselle Reserve Special Lucas Carton.

The New, Better Than Ever, BALD EAGLE Is Back

The delicious Bald Eagle wines have returned to Sherry-Lehmann and they are better than ever! They have been expanded to include two new varietals, a soft, fruity Merlot and a crisp, refreshing Sauvignon Blanc. Chosen from some of the best vineyard soil of California, these new Bald Eagle selections provide the ideal solution for those who want true California varietal flavor at modest cost.

In addition, Sherry-Lehmann will continue the tradition started almost 20 years ago. For each bottle of Bald Eagle wine sold, Sherry-Lehmann will make a contribution to The Audubon Society of New York State to help protect endangered species.

Peddler

I walked it into the production room and stood over the worker while he fixed it. Done.

* * *

Now for the other two bigtime errors. One was right on the cover. The second was in a headline. It can happen. The headline introduced the reader to an article about what New Zealand is doing to help fix the ozone layer. Why such an article would be in a newspaper about the Hamptons is another matter, but nevertheless, that is what it was about.

The headline read NEW ZEALAND CONSIDERS DOING THEIR PART IN CLOSING THE HOTEL IN THE OZONE LAYER. There's a hotel there. And New Zealand is going to send up rockets and shut it down. The Earth is saved.

I don't know how this could have happened. But it got through. And there it is in black and white, introducing a true story about the Government of New Zealand trying to mandate changing the diets of New Zealand sheep so the sheep fart less thereby emitting less ozone robbing methane gasses.

Who writes these articles anyway?

The other error in the paper, right on the front page, is the date of the publication. It came out on July 13. Inside, on every page, it is dated July 13. On the cover it says its the issue of July 20. It isn't. At least not yet.

The errors go on and on. This is what happens when you publish a newspaper from the honeymoon suite of the hotel in the ozone layer. Einstein's theory of time travel into the future is proven. But then you go inside and its right where you were. Well, we're being evicted by the New Zealanders.

Where will we go? I guess we'll just stand around here on the street corner, a sign around our necks, rattling the coins in our cup.

If we make mistakes sometimes by accident, at other times we make mistakes on purpose. For example, over the last two months, we have run article after article complaining about the road workers tearing up the streets in the Hamptons. In the spring, the Village Improvement Societies planted flowers everywhere. Then Memorial Day and the summer season arrives and the State DOT begins jackhammering and bulldozing. It could not have been worse.

Finally, we said draconian methods would be implemented during the last week in June to drive these construction workers away. Dan's Papers then organized a vigilante group to impound all the construction equipment and give the workers one way Jitney tickets out of town on the morning of Friday, June 29. Amazingly, it happened. By noon on Friday all the construction workers were gone. Even the New York Post wrote about our efforts under the headline HERO OF THE HIGHWAYS in their edition Thursday morning, June 28. It appeared on page eight. You could look it up. The the Post wrote another article about our efforts on June 30, joining in the swing of things by suggesting the "construction workers are going to go to Dan's Papers to have it out with Dan."

Well, during the next few days, I looked out our windows, but the construction workers didn't come. And I decided the truth is what really happened which I have just described, and what really, REALLY happened, which is something else entirely.

A Busy Week

Dogs, Elephants, Plovers, Surfers, Sex, Rudy, Beach Fires And The Ice Cream Man

By Dan Rattiner

THE LAW THAT ISN'T

For the last thirty one years, Southampton has had a law banning dogs on beaches. During that time, local residents have continued to bring their dogs to the beaches and parks to give them a run, and to the best of anybody's knowledge, nobody has ever been arrested or given a ticket for it. After all, many police officers have dogs. And dogs have places to go and things to do — retrieving sticks thrown into the surf for example — just like people.

Not that anybody has ever lobbied to get this situation changed. But last month, the Town Supervisor, who apparently is not familiar with the nuances of the situation, looked at the old law and thought dogs need a place to go. He had the law amended. Now dogs can go on Tiana Beach in East Quogue and Ponquogue Beach in Hampton Bays from September 15 to March 15.

Many people are objecting to this new law. I've been bringing my dog to the beach for thirty years and nobody has bothered me, is mostly the reaction. Now we're only allowed to bring the dogs to only certain beaches?

Apparently, these people don't realize the law has been loosened up for their benefit.

"If the new law doesn't work, we'll change it," Town Recreation Superintendant Allyn Jackson said. "It's not exactly the biggest problem in the world."

...as long as a fire is fifty feet from the dune and no larger than eighteen feet in diameter, they will probably overlook it.

So tell your dog you can only take him to these two beaches in Southampton from September 15 to March 15. And tell him for the rest of the year he has to hold it. Then take him anywhere you want.

ANOTHER ONE

If the law prohibiting dogs on the beach is being ignored in Southampton, a law prohibiting excessively large beach fires in East Hampton Town is being ignored too, or so say the residents of Navy Road in Montauk.

According to the law, there aren't supposed to be any beach fires. But the authorities allow it. The Town Supervisor Jay Schneiderman says that the guidelines the board has given the police are that as long as a fire is 50 feet from the dune and no larger than 18 feet in diameter, they will probably overlook it.

I have a Lincoln Navigator that is just under eighteen feet. I could burn that on the beach, or anything smaller than that. Bigger than that I could be in trouble.

UP WITH ELEPHANTS

If dogs are in the news, so are elephants. Protesters from the organization People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA) had come into town from their home base in Virginia, armed with posters and cardboard signs and tombstones which they set up on the lawn of Southampton Town Hall to protest the possible arrival of the circus coming to town. It turned out, however, that the proper procedures and notifications had not been sent out about this meeting, and so the Town Board postponed the meeting for a week. PETA will send people up again on July 24 to try once again to stop the Warren Beatty Cole Brothers Circus from getting a permit, which they have gotten every year for 20 years, to have hold their circus at the Elks Club grounds on August 7 and 8.

On the other hand, there seems to be no objection to something called Circus Smirkus, which is coming to town on August 10, 11 and 12. No elephants, probably.

DOWN WITH PIPING PLOVERS

In Westhampton Dunes, meanwhile, the entire village of 250 homeowners have filed a $12.5 million lawsuit against the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the Army Corps of Engineers for being over-enthusiastic in trying to save the endangered Piping Plovers, which nest on the beaches here.

A spokesman for the villagers — this is an incorporated village lawsuit — said these environmental groups have roped off nearly 90% of the two mile long ocean beach in that village, keeping homeowners from going swimming.

"All for about two dozen tiny birds," the spokesman said. The spokesman said the village is suing for the loss in property value for not being able to go to the beach.

A spokesman for the Corp of Engineers, meanwhile, said that it was common practice to put up fencing so far from the nests of the plovers, so people won't go anywhere near them. "People can look at them through binoculars," he said.

UP WITH SURFERS

Finally, there are the surfers. Lots of them. Both local and from far away, because the surf is so rad out here. Problem is the village surfers get free parking stickers to use at the beaches, while those from far away have to pay as much as $130. Until now. Suddenly there is a new law that says people not from the Village can't park at the beaches AT ALL. The out-of-area people are crowding out the

Dentistry

In A Land Where Nobody Gets Insulted, Sick Or Injured, Dentistry Lags Behind

By Dan Rattiner

I've been thinking a lot about dentistry lately. Years ago, you had a dental appointment, you went. You HAD to go.

Today, NOBODY goes. It's a big problem. The day before, the nurse at the dentist's office calls you to remind you you have an appointment. The morning of the appointment she calls again. Sometimes you STILL don't go.

It's not that dentistry has changed. As a matter of fact, dentistry has NOT changed. They still sit you down in a very comfortable chair, lean you back, and then jab you in the mouth with a very sharp needle. Then it goes downhill from there.

The reason for the different attitude toward dentists now is that SOCIETY has changed. Not long ago, before political correctness, people did what they had to do and if they got injured or killed doing it, so be it. It was almost a matter of pride that when they built the Brooklyn Bridge back in 1883, thirteen workmen died. What sacrifice. What dedication. But look what we've got.

Today if somebody is killed building a big bridge

Nobody should EVER have to even be injured at work or injured anywhere else for that matter.

Driving in a car not long ago was no big deal. You got in, you drove it. If you hit something, maybe you were dead. Life goes on.

Today we have seatbelts and airbags and sidepanel air bags and children's seats and right there on the visor above the steering wheel there is this big notice that says INJURY OR DEATH CAN RESULT FROM DRIVING THIS VEHICLE.

Recently I read where they are now beginning to install little push button latches on the inside of car trunk lids. You get caught in the trunk and you can't get out and you just read the instructions next to the little button latch. There's even a tiny nightlight in there so reading won't

Personally, I speak as someone who once got his head stuck between the bars of his crib when little - my mother told me about it...

there is an investigation, a scandal, a lawsuit, a huge payout by the city and the construction company and maybe somebody even goes to jail. Nobody is EVER supposed to get killed. We have the technology.

Bye Bye Big Bird

Beauty Is In The Eye Of The Beholder, But Maybe Not In The Eye Of The Next Beholder

By Dan Rattiner

There are certain people on the East End who, in their minds, divide the place up into two parts. There's the Before I Got Here part. And the After I Got Here Part. The Before I Got Here part was wonderful. The After I Got Here part stinks. The new arrivals have screwed this wonderful place up.

In a way, you can hardly blame these people. The east end, after all, is an astonishing place. You come to it, whenever you come to it, and you are immediately captivated by its natural beauty. There is indeed no place that I know on the planet that is so amazingly beautiful — the sand, sea, bays and beaches — and yet so near to a sophisticated big city. And so these people, having discovered the east end the way it is, think they have to keep it that way. They were qualified demonstrate just how this works.

Before I got here, there was, among our great natural beauties here on the east end, this sweeping stretch of unobstructed beach on Peconic Bay with the seagulls circling overhead and the surf lapping on the shore. A natural scene.

But then, on this beach, which is in Southold, some people named James and Barbara Miller moved into one of the beach houses there and shortly thereafter placed, right there on the beach in front of their house, a sculpture of a heron. You know how people put a little metal swan on their lawn? Or a metal deer or cow? I for one don't like this sort of thing but some people do.

But then there are were the After I Got Here People, among them me, who considered Big Bird to be a blot on the landscape.

enough to discover the place after all.

Certainly that is what has happened to me. And so I would like to present a perfect example of Before I Got Here and After I Got Here to

Big Bird

And it is their property, so I can't stop them. But on the beach there, the Miller's heron is not something on a metal stick you can shove into the ground. It is forty feet high, is made of steel and weighs two tons.

This heron was made by noted sculptor Roberto Julio Bessin and was brought in by the Millers from Port Jefferson. It cost a lot of money and originally stood on a site alongside the FDR Drive, though it had to be removed because the city considered it a menace to motorists. They'd slow down to look at it. They'd honk at it.

The Millers, who own one of those environmental cleanup companies here on Long Island, looked at the heron in Port Jefferson, liked it, and because they could afford it, bought it. Whether they were just thinking of themselves, with their own land, with the dotted property lines going down to the water defining their private property where they could do what they wanted, or whether they thought everybody would like it, is unknown. In any case, in the early spring of 1998, they got what they thought was the necessary paperwork to put a sculpture on their lawn, and in April they had a crane on a barge bring it in from Port Jefferson.

Now we come to the Before I Got Here and the After I Got Here part. There were, and are, as it turned out, many After I Got Here People. They came, they fell in love with the place, and one of the things they fell in love with was this forty foot statue of a heron on the beach of Peconic Bay. It was here when they got here. Part of the scenery. A New York Times reporter, writing last week about the third and final act of what was to become a great controversy, interviewed one of these people. This was Jean H. Cooper, a beauty consultant who lives in Mattituck and who attends a Bible study session every Tuesday morning at the Miller's home. They sip orange juice, read, and pray. And worship, what, Big Bird?

Isn't there something in the Bible about not worshipping graven images?

The Great Golf Controversy

How Can A Little Golf Course In Sagaponack Be Such A Big Thing

By Jan Silver

"If it's springtime in the Hamptons, a development battle must be brewing. Three years ago it was Ira Rennert and his 57,000-square foot villa. Two years ago, it was Itzhak and Toby Perlman's rejected plan for a music school on Ronald S. Lauder's land. Last year it was Alec Baldwin and friends fighting a proposed golf course in the Springs section of East Hampton. This year, it's miniature golf. Miniature golf. —Lead story in the "House & Home" section of The New York Times, May 5, 2001.

"The first non-indigenous people arrived on the fertile South Fork by boat in 1640. They came to what is now called Conscience Point, a peninsula jutting into Peconic Bay, Southampton. They had broken off from Roger Williams' Rhode Island settlement, which had splintered off from the Massachusetts Bay Colony. So, right from 1640 onward, independent-minded people came to the South Fork." —from "The Once and Future Hamptons," Dan's Papers, July 31, 1998.

Poxabogue Golf Course on Montauk Highway in Sagaponack, at the eastern edge of the Town of Southampton, is a nine-hole public golf course, putting green and driving range with a small pro shop/office and popular local restaurant. It has been there for many years, existing before the Town wrote villages. (The public Sag Harbor Golf Club nearby is on state land in the Town of East Hampton).

In 1998, Poxabogue's owners sold a rundown course to a group of investors (PGC Property LLC)—a few of them local—who could see the value of a nine-hole public course and driving range in the area. The new owners fixed Poxabogue up a lot. They hired a course superintendent, Tim Doubrava, who had been at Bridgehampton's Atlantic Golf Club. He supervised a complete upgrading of the course which is now certified by the Metropolitan (New York) Golf Association. The parking lot was rolled and pebbled so it isn't an obstacle course of water-filled a zoning code in 1957. It gets a lot of use from Bridgehampton, Sagaponack, Wainscott, and East Hampton residents plus vacationing duffers because it is now a very well-maintained, convenient and moderately-priced public golf facility near these potholes after a rain. The office shack and snack bar were turned into a tiny pro shop and restaurant. The tee stations at the driving range were redone; and the southeastern corner of the property became

Poxabogue's new owners hired a staff of 18 including several teaching pros and head pro Scott Terilli, who is developing a children's golf program. After checking with the environmental activist Group for the South Fork, PGC instructed the course superintendent to work along strict, environmentally-safe guidelines. He did, and Poxabogue is now one of two Suffolk County golf courses enrolled in the Audubon Cooperative Sanctuary System.

The same year that PGC Property purchased Poxabogue and started to upgrade it, the Rennert house controversy erupted in the very same hamlet of Sagaponack. Local land and homeowners, objecting to the massive Rennert construction, used every legal means possible but could not stop that project. The following year, 1999, philanthropist and local landowner Ronald Lauder wanted to donate his farm fields to the Perlman Music School for a small teaching and dormitory facility that would mostly be used in the summer. Again, local residents objected, so the Perlman Music School located on Shelter Island.

This past February, PGC Property filed an application with the Southampton Town Planning Board to make more improvements at Poxabogue. The initial application was approved by all six Planning Board members present at a March 2 meeting, then forwarded to the Zoning Board of Appeals for review because a variance is needed on the eastern part of the property. Although the golf course existed before Southampton Town's 1957 zoning code, the property is actually two parcels—22 acres where the golf course, driving range and pro shop/restaurant are now, and 17.2 acres residentially zoned for two-acre house lots. The maintenance shed, some of the parking lot, a few additional driving-range stations and a teaching area are on the eastern parcel. A variance from the ZBA is needed for this parcel to implement Poxabogue's proposed changes.

They would like to (1) add a second story to the existing pro-shop/restaurant building for storage and office space; (2) move the existing driving range back (north) about 30 yards so that the (3) parking lot could be re-configured; (4) add 10 more stations to the driving range if there is room; (5) move the maintenance area from the southeastern edge of the property to the center of the golf course and build a shed for equipment; (6) keep that southeastern edge along Montauk Highway as a teaching area; (7) make a short-game practice area in the northeast corner of the property; and (8) build a new, "realistic" style miniature golf course on the eastern side of the property (designed as a small replica of a real course). The mini-golf would have lights not higher than 10 feet, similar to the low-level lights at the Lynch Links miniature golf course behind the Hampton Jitney/Omni building in Southampton. PGC also plans to screen the mini course from its residential neighbors with berms and trees.

The Town sent notices to all adjacent property owners regarding Poxabogue's application for a variance and hearing before the ZBA. They formed an ad hoc group, the Wainscott/Sagaponack Property Owners, to look into Poxabogue's requested changes. They have a website, www.TWCgroup.com/poxabogue. It contains news stories and an editorial from The Southampton Press of April 5 and 12, 2001, plus letters to the editor of that paper, a letter of objection to the ZBA signed by representatives

Ann Cooper, executive chef at The Ross Institute, Center for Well Being, is on a mission with a truly inspiring story to tell. Her mission is to change the way children are fed and to change the way America eats. She may very well be the Rachel Carson of the 21st century.

Her story begins in 1973 when she was a very young seventeen. In Ann's own words she was something of a problem child in school. In an alternative high school she decided her avocation would be "ski bum" and she hitchhiked out to Telluride, Colorado. Shortly after arriving she called home and said she needed money and the response was, "You got yourself there, you figure it out." Having never worked or cooked she talked her way into an assistant breakfast position and that was her culinary beginning.

Following several cooking stints, Ann enrolled in the Culinary Institute of America in Hyde Park, New York and graduated in 1979. Her career took her to positions with Holland America Cruises and the Radisson Hotel chain where she became the first female executive chef. She returned to Telluride, Colorado and became food and beverage director at a ski resort that did 10,000 meals a day. Eventually, Ann got into larger catering and consulting events, which she continues to do to this day.

In 1990, Ann accepted the position of executive chef at the Putney Inn in Vermont. Throughout this period many more consulting jobs, both nationally and internationally, became available. In the mid-90s Ann decided to write a book. She first wrote, A Woman's place is in the Kitchen; The Evolution of Woman Chefs, published by Wiley. In 1998 she started on her second book called Bitter Harvest, A Chef's Perspective on the Hidden Dangers in the Foods We Eat and What You Can Do About It. Rutledge published it in 2000.

While in the throes of that book Ann received a call about a project that was going on in East Hampton, N.Y. Her name had come up as a recommendation since the project's philosophy was about the things she is passionate about and had written about, namely organic foods. Ann was not looking for a job but was convinced to come to East Hampton in the summer of '99 for an interview at the Ross Institute.

After a number of visits Ann decided this was the right place for her. She officially started as the executive chef at the Ross School in October of that same year. Here at the Ross School, which has over 200 students, she had the potential and the challenge of changing the way future generations eat.

When Ann was working on her first book in the mid-90s she met a number of women chefs such as Alice Waters, chef/owner of the celebrated Chez Panisse in Berkeley, California and Nora Pouillon, the chef/owner of the all organic restaurant Nora in Washington DC. These women were devoted to organic, seasonal, regional and sustainable foods in ways that she had never been. Other events seemed to be happening that caused an epiphany for her. A friend, Gary Holleman, now deceased, who was instrumental in having her first book called, "The Fresh Network." His concept was to pair chefs and farmers well before anybody else was doing it as a way of helping farmers subsist in Vermont. Ann's concerns were to get the quality of food from the farmers to the consumers and was awakened by some of the frustrations in dealing with the inherent problems. For example, while at the Putney Inn she ordered 150 racks of Vermont lamb she would need for the week. When they told her they couldn't help her she questioned why. "What do we do with the rest of the lamb, they questioned? She told them it was their problem and they replied, "No, you're the chef, it's your problem."

How different it is for Ann Cooper to be working at the Ross School compared to her previous career in high-end white tablecloth restaurants. Her sous chefs and a well-trained support team who wanted to be part of the project accompanied her to the Ross School. While she might miss the food and wine pairings at the school, she continues to be involved in benefits that occasionally take her to many parts of the country. As president elect of The Woman Chefs and Restaurateurs Organization, she may do a benefit such as a James Beard dinner or a breast cancer benefit with women chefs paired with women wine makers.

The challenge of showcasing her very fine food at the Ross School is as meaningful to Ann as any of the benefits she does. Changing the way people eat has energized Ann. At the Ross Institute, Ann has been given the venue to do beautiful, flavorful, wonderful food creatively, which she is so enthusiastic about. Through special individual programs at the school she is able to extend the vast information on organic foods to her students and to the community at large.

Mrs. Ross, that is Courtney Ross the founder of the Ross Institute, supports the idea. With 3,000 recipes in a data bank, one of Mrs. Ross' goals is to have Ann construct a blueprint on how her food philosophy and preparation can be done in schools across America. A typical lunch at a school in America costs $1.09 to produce. All of us who shop in a grocery store today realize how little you can get for $1.09. A typical school lunch that Ann described was not very appetizing. "It's clear," she said, "that we can not move forward, educationally, physically, and socially and changes must be made for the next generation." Ann hopes to move forward with her data bank of recipes and is setting up a framework of how they can be cycled into menus in schools in a way that is cost effective.

Ann is currently working on this program and taking it one step further. What she would like to do is get governmental support in improving the character and quality of the American diet. When Ann sees what schools actually get from the government, which is mostly canned, processed and packaged foods, she sees it as a way to satisfy written, was involved with a group of chefs called Chefs Collaborative. He drew Ann into the group where she is now on the executive committee.

At almost the same time, another group in Vermont headed by Roger Clapp, the then Assistant in the Department of Agriculture, developed an idea government subsidies. When they buy up excess products, such as pork made into nuggets, Ann asks, "Why don't we give them lettuce, why don't we support fresh produce and fruit into school systems?"

Ann would like to be able to quantify over time how much healthier children will be and how much they can learn given a more nutritious diet. She would also like to take the diet into area schools first and then as far afield as they can. Working closely with her staff Ann is developing a website to have the information accessible to the world at large. All of the recipes and nutritional data will be available to anyone who can use the Internet.

The school has a full composting program. Only 20% of the waste of the entire facility goes to the landfill, about 60-65% are composted and about 15-20% is recycled. The composting is under the direction of Steve Storch of the Green Thumb Halseys in Water Mill.

Ann's enthusiasm spills over when she speaks about her purchases from 50-60 local farmers. She totally supports the local economy and the local community. She feels strongly about supporting neighboring farmers or producers who are not certified organic and to help them go in the direction of organic farming. This, she claims, is better than trucking in organic products from thousands of miles away. In winter, some of the local farms such as The Green Thumb in Water Mill, Quail Hill in Amagansett and Satur Farms in Cutchogue are wintering produce such as wintergreens, beets and squash for the school's winter menus. There is lots of exchange between the students and the farmers both at the school and farm sites. How satisfying this is for Ann and for the students who are truly connecting with the local agricultural community.

In the beginning the food at the school offered a challenge for the students who come from such diverse backgrounds. At the school 55% of the students get financial aid, really a testament to Mrs. Ross' regard for what is happening at the Ross Institute. Much of the food was very unique to the students and they soon came to love it. Everything is done from "scratch." Beverages include a variety of organic juices made with filtered water; teas are served in summer and hot chocolate in winter. There are no sodas or processed foods served at the Ross School. The only processed food in Ann's kitchen is balsamic vinegar. Everything begins from its raw state, such as beans, legumes and grains. Ann may compromise only when she has to buy canned organic tomatoes for sauces in winter.

Ann received lots of grateful notes from the students at the end of the school year, especially from seniors who were concerned about what they will be eating when they go to college and would eagerly take Ann along with them. A graduation requirement at the school is that students plan, prepare and serve a nutritious meal. There is a wellness elective where they can elect to work in the school kitchen. Next year Ann will be going into the classes working with the students on a cultural basis. She will discuss how culinary history fits into what has happened in history. If, for instance, they are studying China in the 14th century they will research what they ate at that time. Or, when they study the potato famine in

I have always found Sandra Bernhard to be very disconcerting. For example, I ran into her at a party in Water Mill last year. She's tall, strange looking, but yet beautiful in an odd kind of way. In performance earlier, she had paced around cursing at the audience, cursing at herself in the most intimate and hilarious ways imaginable. And here she was at the party wanting to know what time the services were at the Synagogue the next night. To say that talking to her and finding her perfectly normal is disconcerting might be an understatement, but the bottom line is, I just didn't know what to make of her. Will the real Sandra Bernhard please stand up?

I had the same reaction when I talked to her again last week. She was out here in the Hamptons visiting friends and will perform her new show, The Love Machine at the Westhampton Beach Performing Art Center this Saturday night.

Where to begin. I asked her an ordinary question: where was she from?

"I was born in Clinton, Michigan and raised in Scottsdale, Arizona," she said, answering me in a perfectly straightforward and normal way. "In high school I wanted to be a singer, but then I tried doing stand up comedy, and being in Scottsdale kind of spurred me on. What I do is really too off beat for Arizona. And so after a while I knew if I wanted to succeed, I would have to move to LA, which I did."

This was in the late 1970s. She was nineteen and she began by going to clubs and performing on open mike nights, singing songs – everything from Broadway shows to rock and roll – and telling these odd stream of consciousness stories, her trademark, that bear her soul and your soul. And she really got into it.

"I was trying to be dramatic, sexy and funny, all at the same time. My mentors were Carol Burnett, Carol King, Tina Turner, Carol Channing and the early Bette Midler. I kind of mixed them all around."

She also took advantage of anything that she thought might further her career. Her debut album called I'm Your Woman came out on Polygram Records in 1985. This came two years after her movie debut, a small to medium part in which she played a fanatical fan, opposite Robert DeNiro and Jerry Lewis in The King of Comedy. It got her a Best Supporting Actress title from the National Society of Film Critics.

In 1988 she released her second album entitled Without You, I'm Nothing, which was nominated for a Grammy. This was the sound track for her first off Broadway, sold out, one woman show at The New York Orpheum Theatre called, Without You, I'm Nothing. It was also made into a film released in 1990, which the Village Voice chose as one of the top ten films of that year.

Sandra Bernhard, in a number of fields and in a very short time, was turning out to be very, very good.

In the middle of this she wrote two books, Confessions of a Pretty Lady in 1987 and Love,

The Village Voice described her as a terrorist lap dancer and Show Business magazine said she was hip, funky, caustic, reflective, wistful...

Love and Love, which Harper and Collins published in 1993. She also performed on television. From 1991 to 1996 she played the role of Nancy on the show Roseanne. She also played the role of an intimidating attorney appearing in two episodes of Ali McBeal.

Here's the kind of thing Sandra Bernhard does on stage still performing her standup comedy routines.

"I just did a brilliant voiceover for a National Geographic special, very subtle work."

On her former friend Madonna and her move to Scotland: "Well, she's arrived. She's truly a part of royalty now. It's what she's worked for all these years. There she was shooting skeet, staring from the castle window, looking through the gloaming at the presentation of the falconry. So moved."

On the new first lady: "Let's not underestimate the beauty and fashion sense of Laura Bush."

In 1998, Sandra Bernhard took Manhattan by storm with her sold out, triumphant off Broadway show entitled, I'm Still Here, Damn It at New York City's Westbeth Theater Center. It ran six months. Critics described her as an angst driven, foul mouthed, poison-laced joy ride of a person who banks and careens through the world of fashion, celebrity, rock and religion. She's been described by The Village Voice as a terrorist lap dancer and Show Business Magazine described her as hip, funky, caustic, reflective, wistful, funny, ferocious and fabulous.

Here's Bernhard on Pittsburgh: "A Tuesday night in Pittsburg is like New Years Eve in Hong Kong, Paris and New York, all rolled up in one."

In Bernhard's current standup performance she is joined by warm-up rock divas such as Sarah McLachlan, Cheryl Crow, The Pretenders and Me'Shell Ndege Ocello. And she's backed up by five musicians who call themselves The United Colors of Benetton Band.

I asked Sandra how her new show got called The Love Machine.

"Well, we had to name it something," she said. "When we did it in July we called it, Songs I Sang on the Kibbutz. And then for a while I thought it would really be great if we could call it, Stephen Spielberg, Kate Capshaw, Tom Hanks and Rita Wilson Cordially Invite You To An Evening With Sandra Bernhard because every invite in Hollywood has them cordially inviting you to something. So we tried that and when we called Spielberg and asked if was OK, he said no. So we decided we would call it The Love Machine. It's named after the Jacqueline Suzanne book – not The Valley of the Dolls book – but another book, that in my opinion is a better book. The Love Machine.

One thing that I forgot to mention is that in addition to doing Broadway, standup, television, records and movies, Sandra has become a fashion model. Her absolutely impossible look, both beautiful and ugly, has graced the pages of Vanity Fair and other fashion magazines. Her clothes come from Prada, Gucci, Louis Vuitton, Helmut Lang and Marc Jacobs and last June she hosted the annual Counselor Fashion Designer's Awards Gala. She came out and stared at the audience and said the following: "I love you, I hate you, hold me." It brought the house down.

How do you interview somebody who is completely off the wall?

"Do you come to the Hamptons often?" I asked. "I come out anytime I can," she said. "I walk, I hang out, I barbeque, I get corn and fresh pies, I love the private moments."

I asked about her daughter Cicely who is two and a half.

"She's funny too." Sandra said. "And she's smart. She gets it."

I asked her if she had any rules about child rearing.

"I think today that parents raise their children with no boundaries and without respect for other people," she said. This from a woman described as a comic anarchist. "I give Cicely a lot of rules, a lot of discipline and I try to impart to her a lot of inspiration. She watched one of my shows the other night and when I came backstage, she said, 'I saw you. You're very funny. I like that.' "Sandra Bernhard, normal person. The end. •

McEnroe's Team Victorious

By Jan Silver

Patrick McEnroe's NY Hamptons tennis team won both home matches last weekend, July 14 and 15, at Amagansett EastSide Tennis Club. On Saturday, the Hamptons defeated the Hartford Foxforce in a close match, 18-16. The "Force," led by Monica Seles and the Jensen brothers, Murphy and Luke, could not quite overcome the Hamptons players led by Patrick McEnroe. The match hinged on the final women's doubles set. The Hamptons' powerful duo, Tina Krizan and Katarina Srebotnik, overwhelmed Seles and partner Magdalena Maleeva 5-0.

On Sunday, brother John joined Patrick and the rest of the Hamptons team to face the St. Louis Aces led by Andy Roddick and Jared Palmer. The Hamptons team won the match decisively, 23-17, although 42-year-old John McEnroe lost his singles battle with the young American sensation fresh from Wimbledon, "A-Rod" Andy Roddick, 18, by a 4-5 game score. Tina Krizan, 26, and Katarina "Kat" Srebotnik, 20, both from Slovenia, continued their winning streak. They are now the #2 doubles team in the league.

This weekend's matches feature handsome Jan-Michael Gambill playing for the Hamptons on Friday, beginning at 7:30 p.m., against the Springfield Lasers headed by David Wheaton. On Saturday, John McEnroe rejoins the Hamptons team as they take on the Schenectady Buzz led by powerful Justin Bowers. The Buzz gave the Hamptons their only home defeat to date, so the Hamptons team will be out to avenge.

The Hamptons now rank fourth out of nine teams in the Tyco World TeamTennis league standings. With only two weeks left in the brief WTT July season, Patrick McEnroe's team could wind up in the top spot. Come to one of the four home matches to be played at Amagansett EastSide Tennis Club on July 20, 21, 28 or 29 and root the team on.

The locals planted the flowers, The construction workers tore them up. I suggested we find out who at the State DOT was responsible and we hang him. I said however that the efforts to find out who this was were going nowhere. The State DOT was doing a coverup for the culprit.

This article, apparently, made its way to Albany. Soon I got a very snide letter from a Craig Siracusa at the State DOT which began, "Mr. Rattiner evidently just noticed the caterpillars (backhoes that is) the week before Memorial Day." It went on from there. It said that this work was being done with the complete knowledge, approval and cooperation of our local authorities, so what was I complaining about? It said that it was fully planned ahead of time, that they be out of there on June 29, and that they wouldn't be back until after Labor Day at which time they would stay until Christmas. What more did I want?

Apparently, this person was unaware that the summer season starts here in May. We needed them out THEN. Had no one ever told them when the summer season starts here?

I decided not to publish this letter.

Instead, I decided to write a fake article about a vigilante group driving these people out of town on June 29. I would organize it. I would lead it.

And I would take full credit for the results. When they were gone, I did. They were gone, weren't they? This is known in the trade as making a serendipitous event, or in another trade converging fantasy with reality, or, up at the Brookhaven Laboratory, causing two contrary cosmic events to collide thus proving Einstein's theory of the creation of the universe.

I might note that, in the middle of all of this, I got a SECOND letter from Albany, pretty much re-iterating what was written in the first, but addressed to me and written in a more polite manner. I hadn't run the first letter. Perhaps I'd run the second. Nope.

locals. Bummer.

A champion of the surfers, councilperson Carolyn Zenk from the Town of Southampton (not the Village,) has written to the Mayor of the Village, Joe Romanosky. Romanosky voted FOR the ban.

"It is my duty to bring to your attention that very restrictive parking regulations near coastal beaches cut non-Southampton Village citizens off from their property rights and coastal heritage," she wrote. "Many residents have their hearts set on surfing some of the areas that are now restricted. This reduces the quality of life for many of them."

"If you're on a bicycle, you can go to any beach," Village Administrator Joe Van Nostrand pointed out.

It is beachfront in Montauk just behind the Indian Field Ranch, is 5.7 acres and has a main house and several smaller outbuildings. times, the friends, creative types and hangers on from "The Factory" in Union Square would come out and party at the place.

Warhol and his friend Paul Morrissey bought the place in 1982 for $220,000 from members of the Church family, who had owned it since the 1940s. Reportedly, there was a man before that who bought the property for $50, laughed up his sleeve when he sold it a few years later for $500, and then was kicking himself when a few years after that the property got sold to the Churches for $5,000.

ZIPPING TO EUROPE

An M. I. T. Engineer named Frank Davidson, who worked on the Chunnel, the tunnel that connects England and France, is putting together a consortium of private and public investors to build a tunnel under the Atlantic Ocean. Estimated cost for the project is just over $100,000,000,000.

The idea, according to Davidson, is to drop a heavy pre-made rubber tube onto the sea bed, suck out the air to make a vacuum, and then send trains, powered by magnets, rocketing through the tubes from Liverpool, England to New York in about half an hour.

I am not making this up. The story originally broke in the Daily Mail in London, and is now being followed up on the MSN Network. Davidson says the magnet "train" will rocket along at about 4,000 miles an hour. It will be far faster, smoother and safer than air travel because there would be no possibility of derailment. He says the tunnel will be completed by 2030.

POOR RUDY

Mayor Guiliani's lawyers have charged that Donna Hanover has let Gracie Mansion fall into disrepair, in spite of the fact that keeping the house up is, according to the city, her job. That, and being hostess for the Mayor's official functions.

Though the Mayor's lawyers have filed papers against Hanover about the problem, Guiliani himself is apparently unaware of the shabby shape the mansion is now in. Balcony railings are broken, paint is peeling, stucco is falling down. Much of the damage is visible from the street.

On his weekly radio talk show, a caller named Brenda from Rockland County said that in driving by the house, she noticed that the paint was peeling. She asked the Mayor why that was.

"The paint is peeling?" the Mayor asked.

"Yeah. I know, with your going through a divorce and all, you don't spent much time there. You should look."

"I DO spend a lot of time there," the Mayor said.

As everyone in the City, and in the country and on the planet knows by now, since the Mayor and his lawyers tell everybody every day, the Mayor has pretty much removed himself from Gracie Mansion, preferring to spend time with Judi Nathan in an apartment house or at her place out in the Hamptons in order to avoid the stress of the divorce.

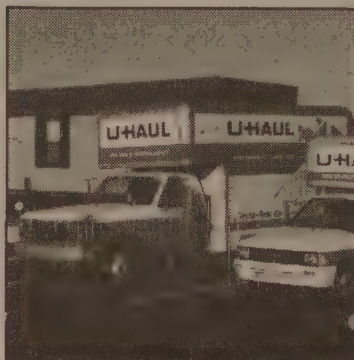

Research has been done on this situation. The exterior was last painted just six years ago. The paint company Benjamin Moore donated the paint. All that had to be paid for was the labor, which was done by unionized city employees who are trained house painters. The labor cost came to $70,000. Apparently they took many coffee breaks. Listened to a lot of music over portable radios.

A paint job that last just six years? Badly applied? Bad paint? Maybe old stuff left over in the back of the warehouse? Benjamin Moore isn't going to

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Tips for Island Moms

One of the Islands artist's, also a philosopher, Richard Denning told me that women are destined to take over the world because they are willing to work themselves to death. He cited bee colonies as an example. Workers bees, which I thought were both sexes, but just not developed, are all females bees he said, just not fertile. They work constantly and more harmoniously than males.

My dear friend Patty McGayhey sent me a fabulous list of tips that was sent to her by the author, Freddie Balzano. In these tips, "Martha" cites how things are done in Hamptonia, while Patty, Freddie and I, offer a few Island shortcuts for those of us worker bee moms.

Tips for Better Living:

Martha's way #1: Stuff a miniature marshmallow in the bottom of a sugar cone to prevent ice cream drips.

Island way: Stuff the marshmallow in your mouth, and just suck the ice cream out of the bottom of the cone. To avoid drips, lay on the couch with your feet up while eating it.

Martha's way #2: Use a meat baster to "squeeze" your pancake batter onto the hot griddle and you'll get perfectly shaped pancakes every time.

Island way: Buy the precooked kind you toast. To get a perfect shape, trim with scissors.

Martha's way #3: To keep potatoes from budding, place an apple in the bag with the potatoes.

Island way: Buy Hungry Jack mashed potato mix and keep it in the pantry for up to a year.

Martha's way #4: To get the most juice out of fresh lemons, bring them to room temperature and roll them under your palm against the kitchen counter before squeezing.

Island way: Throw the lemons against the kitchen wall to reduce your stress and release the juices.

Martha's way #5: To easily remove burnt-on food from your skillet, simply add a drop or two of dish soap and enough water to cover bottom of pan, and bring to a boil on stovetop.

Island way: Get take out food from the Virtual Cook every night and avoid cooking.

Martha's way #6: Spray your Tupperware with nonstick cooking spray before pouring in tomato based sauces and there won't be any stains.

Island way: Avoid staining your tupperware by throwing leftovers in the back yard, it also saves the raccoons the trouble of tearing open your garbage.

Martha's way #7: When a cake recipe calls for flouring the baking pan, use a bit of the dry cake mix instead and there won't be any white mess on the outside of the cake.

Island way: Who's baking in the summer heat? Go to the IGA. They'll even decorate the cake for you.

Martha's way #8: If you accidentally over salt a dish while it's still cooking, drop in a peeled potato and it will absorb the excess salt.

Island way: If you over salt a dish, that's too bad. Our motto: If we went to the trouble to actually make it, your family better eat it no matter how bad it tastes. If they refuse, hit them with a lemon from Tip #4.

Martha's way #9: Brush some beaten egg white over pie crust before baking to yield a beautiful glossy finish.

Island way: The Mrs. Smith frozen pie directions do not include brushing egg whites over the crust, so don't do it.

Martha's way #10: Place a slice of apple in hardened brown sugar to soften it.

Island way: Run the box over with the truck twice.

Martha's way #11: To determine whether an egg is fresh, immerse it in a pan of cool, salted water. If it sinks, it is fresh, but if it rises to the surface, throw it away.

Island way: You don't have time for lab tests. If you crack open an egg and the smell knocks you down, you'll know it's not fresh.

Martha's way #12: Cure for headaches: Take a lime, cut it in half and rub it on your forehead.

Island way: - Martha, dear, the only reason this works for you is because when you rub lime juice on your forehead it drips down into your eyes. Then the problem isn't the headache anymore, because now you are blind.

Dentistry (Continued from page 33)

be a problem in the dark. And I think they have it in English, Spanish and the language of the home country where the car is made, like German. Everyone else go to hell.

The big trouble is that dentistry has NOT changed. It has NOT kept up with the times. You still get stabbed. They still use this drill. They still shove things in your mouth and have this sucker device for saliva just like they always did. They still even have this secret button that summons a nurse exactly at the moment she is supposed to get in there so she can mix up the stuff they are going to put in or around or on your teeth. And it tastes just as bad as it always did.

Dentistry is one of only two modern inventions that have changed very little in the last forty years. The other is the Polaroid camera. They invented it and put it on the market to great fanfare in 1956. It's still just about exactly the same. Zero improvement.

Personally, and I speak as someone who once got his head stuck between the bars of his crib when little — my mother told me about it and how they had to get the firemen in — I think it is a wonderful thing that we bend every effort to see to it that nobody ever gets sick or injured or dead in America or anywhere else or for that matter even if we are talking about pets or barn animals. Though we may be putting more people and animals on the planet that it can stand, personally it is okay that one of them is me. I like that.

In another five years, the only way they are going to be able to get you to go to the dentist is by having a process server hand you a summons.

YOU ARE HEREBY ORDERED TO GO TO THE OFFICE OF DR. FRANKSMITH, DDS ON FRIDAY AT 4 PM. GO OR SUFFER THE CONSEQUENCES, WHICH IS THAT WE WILL HAVE TO ISSUE THIS ORDER AGAIN.

And still people won't go. Who needs it? Weren't we supposed to have laser beams to fix our teeth by this time? They've got to still stab us in the mouth and drill holes? Move into the twenty-first century, guys.

Sheltered (Continued from page 46)

Martha's way #13: Don't throw out all that leftover wine. Freeze into ice cubes for future use in casseroles and sauces.

Island way: Leftover wine?

Martha's way #14: If you have a problem opening jars, try using latex dishwashing gloves. They give a non slip grip that makes opening jars easy.

Island way: If you have a problem opening jars, carry the jars to the edge of the living room, shout, "Open these!" and hurl them at the man in the lazy boy.

Martha's way #15: Potatoes will take food stains off your fingers. Just slice and rub raw potato on the stains and rinse with water.

Island way: Since we use mashed potato mix, just keep a box of flakes near the sink and use instead of soap.

Martha's way #16-19: Now look what you can do with Alka Seltzer.

16. Clean a toilet. Drop in two Alka-Seltzer get good PR about their donation to this paint job.

Spokespeople for the Mayor say that repainting the mansion will be a problem for next Mayor to solve, since Giuliani leaves office in January. Spokespeople for Donna Hanover say "the house will be turned over to the next mayor of the City of New York in tiptop condition."

Let's all us New York City taxpayers pitch in and have a painting party. See you there all day Thursday.

NO SEX FOR YOU

The State Supreme Court of Wisconsin has ruled that a man convicted of being a "deadbeat dad" is to be forbidden to procreate. His name is David Oakley, he is 34 years old, has had nine children by four women and owes $25,000 in child support.

Reading this story, which was in The New York Times, I was at first unclear how they were going to enforce this. A forced vasectomy? One of those ankle bracelets where they can find out what he is doing and if it tells them he is procreating they rush in and pull him off? Turns out that if he has another kid they put him in jail for the next ten years. Which, oddly, will him even more unable to support his children.

Needless to say, lawyers are running up big fees on this one.

"This has broad implications," said Timothy T. Kay, "because it specifically prohibits a class of individuals from limiting the number of children (they produce) based upon financial resources."

A representative of the ACLU also has grave reservations about this decision. Procreation is a God given right. It would set a dangerous precedent.

"These conditions do pop up from time to time," spokesperson ACLU Julie Sternberg noted.

WHO DID THAT?

A fairly well known book, The Montauk Project, insists that secret time travel operations were being conducted at the Camp Hero army base in Montauk in the 1940s and 1950s. Specifically, they say a Navy Destroyer with fourteen men on board was sent through time and space from Philadelphia to Montauk in 1943 by the military in an experiment involving disassembling its molecules in Philadelphia and then reassembling them in Montauk. On arrival, there was found to have been a flaw in the system. The crew was dead.

It's a wild tale, but it has its believers. Sort of on the order of the Blair Witch Project.

On the other hand, it was noted at an East Hampton Town Board meeting last week that there is a large piece of land at Camp Hero (which was abandoned many years ago), that, strangely enough, was recently cleared. Who did it? And why? An attempt with another destroyer? The Board has not a clue.

(I'm sure the authors are working on a follow up book to The Montauk Project. Maybe the authors will tell us.)

DOWN WITH THE ICE CREAM MAN

You know how, when you were a kid, the ice cream man would come around and down your street? Ice cream man, ice cream man, you'd yell, and you'd get your dad to give you some money and out you'd go to where the ice cream truck was parked. Sometimes you'd get there in time. Sometimes he'd drive away before you could get there. It was a sad day to have all this change left over in your pocket and no ice cream.

Well, last week, the Village of Sag Harbor banned the Ice Cream man. His name is Stephen Garrett and he lives in the Springs and gets a permit every year to drive up and down the streets of the different villages out here. This year he made his usual application in Sag Harbor. This year, they rejected him, 4 to 1. They are the only town or village in this area to turn down the Ice Cream Man. Ever.

Why? Trustee Jonathan Morse said the ice cream truck is "a potential danger." He said the kids should walk into town to get ice cream. The new Mayor, Lauren Fortmiller, said that more research would have to be done before they could make a decision to approve the application.

Mr. Garrett took the defeat in stride. Every other village here welcomes him. He drives slowly. When he stops, blinking lights go on and off and a STOP sign protrudes from the side of the truck warning motorists of his presence. He takes a refresher course in safety annually to keep his license current. And he rings a bell when he comes down the street.

He also has a music box which plays songs, and though he doesn't have it on all the time, if a kid asks to hear it, he puts it on.

"For a little while anyway," he said.

YAHOO NOPE

Yahoo, the internet search engine, reported a drop in revenue for the second quarter of this year, from $273 million last year to $182 million this. They also reported a loss for the quarter of $48.5 million. On the other hand, using something called pro forma watch Big Bird," Mrs. Cooper said. "When I look at his eyes, I see wisdom. It's too bad people don't have the vision to see a little bit farther than their noses. This bird belongs here. He is part of the whole scenery here. You know, Long Island — this is what it's all about."

But then there were the After I Got Here people, among them me, who considered Big Bird to be a blot on the landscape. It hadn't been here before. Now here it was for everyone to see. It is true a man's home is his castle. But that's why they have walls around castles. Several of the people who live next to the Millers filed a lawsuit to have the sculpture removed. They had an unobstructed view before. Now they had this forty foot tall bird. It arrived after I got here, they said. I shouldn't have to look at it.

And so, after a three year court battle, the neighbors won. A big barge with a crane on it (pun) came last week, carefully lifted it up, and took it up to the busy harbor of Greenport, where it is going to be placed at the end of a private dock, welcoming all those who sail by — your tired, your poor and so forth — and I guess we'll see what happens there.

Personally, I opposed this forty foot heron on aesthetic grounds. I just didn't think it was a great sculpture. And I wouldn't have minded if it were a six foot not so great sculpture, or even a ten foot not so great sculpture if it were on a part of the property where the Millers could enjoy it in the privacy of their own home, so to speak. Out there where everybody had to look at it, well, that was something else. I for one didn't want to have to look at it, but since I don't go that way much, I really could have little trouble not looking at it. Those that did have to look at it whether they wanted to or not had filed the lawsuit. I would root for them from the sidelines.

Interestingly, Judge Howard Berler of the State Supreme Court ruled that it had to be removed on fairly narrow grounds. Southold, like many East End towns, requires building permits for the erection of permanent structures. He ruled this was a permanent structure. And so it had to be removed.

In some ways, I suppose what might be ruled as a permanent structure on the North Fork where Southold is, might be ruled a temporary structure in the more tony villages of Southampton and East Hampton.

The residents of East Hampton and Southampton have demonstrated many times over that they have Big Bucks. They don't like something over here, they move it over there. Five tons and forty feet tall? Not a problem. Here, I'll write a check.

Southold? I suppose if the Millers just wrote a check to have it moved around back for awhile, or had a motor and drivetrain affair built so they could tow it on rails to the side of their house every night, the judge might have declared it temporary. But they didn't do that.

An appeal? I don't know.

Perhaps if this sculpture had broader appeal, if it was a fabulous work of art that took your breath away, the sort of thing that me and my friends like, that is in keeping with the way things were Before I Got Here...

You know.

Mercedes Ruehl, Peter and Nejma Beard and Joe Pintauro are expected as special guests at the opening night revelry, as they call it, of the Hamptons Shakespeare Festival, which kicks off its premiere performance of Twelfth Night at the Theodore Roosevelt County Park in Montauk. For more information call 267-0105.

Among those East End nurseries and landscapers named by the Long Island Organic Horticultural Association as knowledgeable in organic work are Good Ground Landscaping, Marders, Righteous Thyme and Roylance Environmentals.

Barbaralee Diamonstein-Spielvogel, Stanley Marcus and Robert Wilson are the honorary chairs for a premiere fundraiser and party at Jack Lenor Larsen's LongHouse Reserve in East Hampton on the evening of July 21. The garden will open at 6 p.m., Elaine Stritch will perform at 7:30, following which there will be the presentation of the LongHouse Medal to playwright Edward Albee. Dinner and dancing to the music of Larry Rivers and his Climax Band will follow.

Nancy Geary's new novel, Misfortune, out in all the stores, has been reviewed this way by Nelson DeMille: "A stunning debut which should be subtitled An Un-Hampton Novel, Nancy Geary, like Richard North Patterson, writes brilliantly about the world of old money, manners, mores and morals."

Mel Brooks, is now writing a book about the writing of the smash hit Broadway show The Producers, which is a remake of the movie, about a fictitious Broadway Show called Springtime for Hitler that was intended to fail big time but didn't. The book will be produced by Miramax, is being invested in by Harvey Weinstein - Brooks received an advance reportedly in the six figures - and it was recently on the cover of Tina Brown's Talk Magazine. Price for the book will be about $30. Brooks is taking August off to write it here in his Water Mill home. It will be available for sale in the lobby of the theatre where the show about the movie about the show is taking place. Whatever.

Benefit chair Linda Cohen Wassong is hosting this year's Artists Against Abuse plate auction to benefit the Retreat at the Channing Daughters Winery in Bridgehampton on August 11. Among those listed as early supporters are Arlene and Alan Alda, Eileen Fisher, Eileen and Richard Ekstract, John and Barbara Hearst, Caroline Hirsch, Alan Slifka, Toni Ross and Jeff Salaway. Also Dan Wassong, Kimberly Goff, Dottie Herman and dozens of others.

review: richard reeves, fridays at five

By Amy Johns

Author! Author! Welcomed Richard Reeves to the Hampton Library, Bridgehampton this weekend.

So great is his historical knowledge of Kennedy and Nixon, that an hour and a half proves barely adequate to share his findings with the audience, and he must be cut short.

Earning a degree in mechanical engineering, Reeves has trod a more creative path as an acclaimed documentary film maker, journalist, author and professor at Columbia University and UCLA. The presentation on the lawn highlights his biography entitled President Kennedy: Profile of Power, which has been awarded the PEN/Faulkner Prize, and his second book, a biography in progress on Richard Nixon, to be published on October 1st of this year. President Nixon: Alone in the White House will be in the style of the Kennedy biography and also the second book in a trilogy on the American presidents that Reeves hopes to complete.

Reeves chose to write on the presidents after reading The Reign and Fall of Haile Selassie, by Katchinski, a Polish journalist, and becoming intrigued by, as Reeves puts it, "how a nod or a smile by the emperor could make or break a person." The impact a leader has on people is truly astonishing.

Reeves goal in his first two biographies, each of which took six years to write, is to compare Kennedy and Nixon. He gives the audience at the library a taste of his expertise on both figures, but focuses mainly on Richard Nixon.

The author shows how dissimilar the two presidents really were. JFK was, of course, the epitome of institutionalized charm and "made figures come alive only when he was in place," Reeves explains. Kennedy used his charisma to change nomination practices forever. Up until JFK, political parties chose candidates according to whether or not they could win, not on the experience they possessed. Kennedy, Reeves informs, had no chance of winning in the Democratic Party convention. Instead, he accounting, they say they really lost only $8.7 million, down from $69 million the year before.

A nasty rumor is that if Yahoo.com gets another year of this they will change their name to Oops.com. BRAVE FOOLS

There were a couple of stories of great bravery in the news this week. In Pensacola, Florida, a man and his eight year old nephew were swimming in the Gulf when a shark appeared and in one horrible bite, took off the eight year old's arm.

There were other bathers at the beach, and with the eight year old, Jessie Arbogast, screaming in pain, they rushed over and helped him to shore. Jesse's uncle, meanwhile, went after the shark. The seven foot long shark outweighed him 800 pounds to 200, but Vance Flosenzier, a strapping 6 foot 3, wanted the arm back.

"This guy was really strapping," an onlooker said. "He was very broad-shouldered, and he could wrestle a gorilla, it looked like to me, and give him a good run."

The fight lasted about three minutes with the two of them thrashing around, and the outcome was Vance wrestling the shark up onto the beach where a police officer dispatched it with a pistol shot between the eyes. The arm was retrieved from the shark's gullet, and after a helicopter ride to a nearby hospital, successfully attached back to the boy's shoulder.

The second act of bravery took place here on the East End, where at 9 am on Monday morning, a would-be armed robber of Cyril's Fish House in Napeague was wrestled to the ground by the owner of the place, Cyril Fitzsimmons, 57.

Fitzsimmons was out front of the restaurant, in an outdoor cafe area when he heard his bookkeeper inside, Barbara Brady, scream. He thought maybe a small animal had come into the office inside where she sat at a desk. Maybe it had jumped up on her.

Fitzsimmons ran inside to see Brady holding her face, with blood coming down, in front of her the 19 year old dishwasher he had dismissed two months ago, carrying a gun by the barrel. He was pistol whipping her. There was cash everywhere.

"I fired Nicholas McKoy because he had a temper he couldn't control," Fitzsimmons said later. "But I couldn't have this."

Fitzsimmons, who is a former high school football wide receiver, tackled McKoy, who is 19, and threw him to the ground. But McKoy wriggled loose, scrambled away and with Fitzsimmons coming after him, got out the door and into a waiting automobile, which roared away.

Unfortunately, the driver of this automobile, Everton Josephs, 36, drove off the wrong way, right into the long traffic jam of cars heading back to the city from Montauk at that hour on Monday morning. Since there is only one road, and Fitzsimmons called the police and could tell them what kind of car it was, it was an easy matter for the cops to set up a roadblock in Amagansett and nab the armed robber and his accomplice as they soon came through.

Barbara Brady was taken to the hospital where she is now recovering from her wounds, which include a broken nose. McKoy has been charged with two counts of second degree assault, first degree robbery and criminal possession of a weapon, while Josephs has been charged with first degree robbery, second degree assault and criminal facilitation in Ireland they will reflect on what it means when a culture disappears for lack of food and water and how it has affected the ethnic growth in the United States? With the potato famine for instance, it was about mono-cropping which is such a big problem today with genetically modified products. No doubt this is the generation that Ann hopes to reach. They are the ones who will question and who will cause change.

When I asked Ann about genetically modified foods she clearly stated that not enough research has been done. We really need to ask many more hard questions before allowing these products into our food supply. All food should be labeled and we should have the choice to eat them or not, she continued. "It's all been about profits for big agribusiness companies and the way private research is being conducted."

While agribusiness is clearly swallowing up the small farmers, the biggest fear for Ann is that agribusiness is going to swallow up organic producers. Organic foods have become a force in the industry, growing by 20% a year. It's the largest growing factor in the agricultural world. Nevertheless, the organic movement is so small that they don't have the lobbying dollars to challenge the big food companies.

Ann's meals are based on fresh seasonal ingredients. On any given day's menu, there are two or three different ethnic choices and a fair amount of Asian and Latin influence. Both of those are very large demographic groups in America and she feels strongly about representing them. The menus, which also include vegetarian and American comfort food, are written each day with the season, nutrition and health in mind.

In summer Ann hopes, as I do, shoppers will use the local farmers markets and join CSA farm programs (community supported agriculture), while she, no doubt, did superb food at the Putney Inn where she still consults, or at other dining establishments, it is at the Ross Institute that she has the potential of educating young people to change the way they eat. Clearly this will be her legacy, being able to share with future generations her knowledge on how we should eat to stay well and healthy and how to protect the planet for the future. This is what brought Ann Cooper to the Ross School and this is what keeps her there.

of the property owners (dated June 14, 2001, when the ZBA hearing was postponed until this September at the request of PGC), and a petition to stop any zoning changes at Poxabogue.

The Bridgehampton, Sagaponack and Wainscott Citizens' Advisory Committees also have some objections to the proposed ZBA application. The objections of all groups center on two major areas: night lights for the miniature golf course will "pollute" the night sky for local residents; and an expanded golf facility will bring more and dangerous traffic congestion to the area.

Three key people involved in the Poxabogue situation were interviewed for this report: Jeffrey Shulman, CEO of PGC Property LLC; Peter Wadsworth of the Wainscott/Sagaponack Property

LISTS AND GRADES

Richard Amper, a marketing man, and the executive director of the Pine Barrens Society, an organization he founded, has taken it upon himself to grade the performances of local east end towns on environmental issues. He rated Riverhead a D-, and he rated Shelter Island an A-. Both Southampton and East Hampton received a C-. He explained East Hampton got a C- because of failure to protect the underground water supply.

East Hampton Supervisor Jay Schneiderman, on the other hand, rated Richard Amper an F.

"Who made him judge?" the Supervisor said. "This is a publicity stunt. It has nothing to do with the environment."

Meanwhile, a Dr. Steven Leatherman has begun to make some money publishing an annual book rating this country's beaches. Leatherman, who has given himself the nickname "Dr. Beach," has ranked practically every beach he can think of. Not that he's visited all of them, though he has visited some of them and heard about others of them. He is the Zagat of the beaches.

This year, what are arguably the most beautiful beaches in the world, East Hampton, has been rated #11, up from #13 last year while Westhampton Beach is #12, up from #14. Why not higher? And why not Southampton or Montauk? Because, Dr. Beach says, they are very out of the way and hard to get to, and that's a minus. We thought that was a plus. Anyway, what about the two beaches our beaches zipped past? Victims of an oil spill? Leatherman was silent on the subject.

HILLARY AND (MAYBE) BILL

Senator Hillary Clinton will be coming to East Hampton for the weekend of July 20 to 22 and will be the guest of honor at a fundraiser (for her) at the home of Alan Slifka on Georgica Road on July 21 from 6 to 8 pm. Former President Bill Clinton may be at this event too.

capitalized on the primary system, journalism and what little television there was at the time to achieve a nomination outside the party system. This was monumental and adds to the compelling nature of the leader's character.

Nixon, on the other hand, earned his post due to sheer will and "connect the dots," as Reeves calls it, intelligence. Nixon was anything but charming. He was an extreme introvert, which makes the story of Nixon, Reeves explains, not his presidency but that he became president at all. The audience learns from the author what an extremely abnormal man the president was. It has been said of the leader, Reeves discloses, that the most difficult aspect of attempting to cover Nixon is reminding yourself that he is a human being. So strong was his internal retreat from social situations and insecurity about dealing with people that all his public appearances, and often private meetings, were scripted and memorized. Reeves further illustrates the extreme difficulty Nixon had with social interaction by telling a story about a memo the president wrote concerning a visit by some of his former classmates at Whittier College to the White House. The memo suggested that they visit when an event was being held at the White House or when a church service was planned. Nixon's reasoning was that if they were given a personal reception, he would have to talk to them.

This memo was just one of thousands that the president used as a means of communication. In fact, this was how he communicated with his wife Pat; memos were relayed to her by Chief of Staff Holdeman. Sadly, Nixon even had trouble interacting with his own wife. This memo system, Reeves describes, also proves Nixon's obsession with documentation. Memos, personal notes and, most importantly, the taping system combine to make Richard Nixon the most well documented president in history. His need to live and work on paper was so great that anyone who was in a room with him was instructed to report within 24 hours exactly what had transpired during the encounter. It was, however, this extensive documentation that led to Nixon's demise. When an audience member asks Reeves if the Watergate scandal was inevitable, the author responds in the affirmative. Nixon built a house of lies that was bound to come crashing down. Everyone in the White House was spying on everyone else and the president was continually "plotting coups against his own administration," Reeves explains.

Perhaps even more interesting than Nixon's compulsion to keep records of all White House occurrences, was his fixation with John F. Kennedy. He had an overwhelming need to outdo the charming leader at every turn. Reeves informs us that when the Oval Office was cleaned out on August 8, 1974 Nixon's detailed, self-scribed funeral plans were the lone papers in the middle drawer of his desk. It was written that he would like The Battle Hymn of the Republic to be played at his service. However, the title of the hymn was then crossed out with a note explaining, NO, that is a Kennedy song. It seems tragic that even while planning his last rites Nixon was tormented by his need to compete with Kennedy.

Reeves adds to Nixon's tragic character by describing the president's reaction to his resignation. By the time the final papers were drafted, it was feared that the leader was suicidal. He wept openly in front of his colleagues and told Chief of Staff Holdeman that he had prayed all night long that he wouldn't wake up the next morning. Reeves expresses that Nixon had a desire for joy in his life, but fell into depression because he could not achieve it. He constantly expected defeat and so could not appreciate or celebrate his triumphs.

Reeves' knowledge on both Kennedy and Nixon is nothing short of astounding and if you were in attendance at his presentation at the Hampton Library, I'm sure you feel, as I do, compelled to read both biographies.

Whispers

by Jill Martin

So much to tell...so much to tell. Last weekend was just perfect...from movies to polo, it epitomized how truly relaxing, yet glamorous, the Hamptons can be.

Friday night, Conscience Point owners Noah Tepperberg and Jason Strauss hosted an "intimate" party for five hundred. Held at the Stuff Magazine house was a screening of five short films currently shown on BMW—films.com. David Fincher, John Frankenheimer, Ang Lee, Wong Kar-Wai, Guy Ritchie and Alejandro Gonzalez Inarritu collaborated on "The Hire" Internet Film Series. BMW, along with Vogue Magazine, were the sponsors of this event that transformed a Southampton house into a magnificent poolside movie theater. The night was flawless...the interesting "shorts" captivated the crowd and the champagne flowed. Attendees included: Ang Lee, Calvin Klein, Jane Holzer, Lulu Johnson, Shoshanna Lonstein, Samantha Cole, Princess Zata Shah of Malasia, Rocco Ancorola, and Chris Barish. And as if the movies weren't enough, the house was an adventureland for adults. The movie-watchers enjoyed video games, Sony play-stations, and pop-a-shot, while DJ Samantha Ronson kept the music going. This fabulous party ended at midnight, time for yours Owners; and Vincent Cannuscio, Southampton Town Supervisor. All three made statements to this reporter.

In a two-hour telephone conversation last week, Jeffrey Shulman was very clear: "The beauty of the Hamptons is that big, commercial development has not been allowed—but the answer to opposing small development is not to put in more houses.... The Town of Southampton's planning board report cites the lack of public recreational land in the town. We are the only public golf course in town.... The best indication of what we will do is what we have been doing to upgrade Poxabogue and make it a family-friendly facility.... Ultimately, if we can't make Poxabogue commercially viable, we will have to sell off the land for houses."

Peter Wadsworth of the Wainscott/Sagaponack Property Owners says that PGC has been "unwilling to hold a dialogue with our group on the issues that concern us. We would have liked to compromise because several of us don't mind Poxabogue as it is now, but they have slammed the door in our face." This group is in the process of getting more formally organized and hiring an attorney to represent them.

Supervisor Cannuscio, who headed Southampton's ZBA for five years before being twice elected Southampton Town Supervisor (he is not running for re-election), states "there is a need for more recreational facilities in Southampton." Poxabogue is in the "Montauk Highway corridor where there is very little residential housing immediately ad-

review: an evening of gershwin

By Marion Wolberg Weiss

AN EVENING OF GERSHWIN WITH MARY CLEERE HARAN AT THE MUSIC FESTIVAL OF THE HAMPTONS

If we were to characterize "An Evening of Gershwin" at the Music Festival of the Hamptons, one word would surely head the list: "evocative." Granted, this single adjective has been used much too often when describing all manner of experiences and events. But it fits here in somewhat unique ways.

Initially, of course, George Gershwin's songs conjure up particular times and places for those who can remember the past, most notably the 1920s and '30s. With cabaret singer Mary Cleere Haran's performance, however, "evocative" has a myriad of meanings.

According to behavioral scientists, a process known as "filtering" determines how such meanings occur. Thus, factors like personal experience, culture and physical setting all played a part in summoning forth certain emotions/ideas when Ms. Haran performed.

For example, the presence of Ms. Haran and her pianist/arranger, Sir Richard Rodney Bennett, brought back a treasured personal experience a few years ago when this critic visited a small English village, suddenly coming across posters which advertised the duo's appearance at a nearby venue. Images from that trip flooded this listener's mind as Ms. Haran sang "The Memory of All That."

Cultural factors were also at work when Ms. Haran's patter between songs often focused on her Catholic upbringing, evoking in this critic similar memories of Catholic friends. Ms. Haran's humorous remark that her husband had been raised by Communists was particularly meaningful for this critic as well, who knew her spouse's gifted, extraordinary parents.

The outdoor setting under the festival tent also evoked a sense of well-being, where various summer scents and sounds merged, allowing our minds to imagine places as far off as, let's say, Tuscany, the setting for a film like Enchanted April (whose music was written by Sir Bennett).

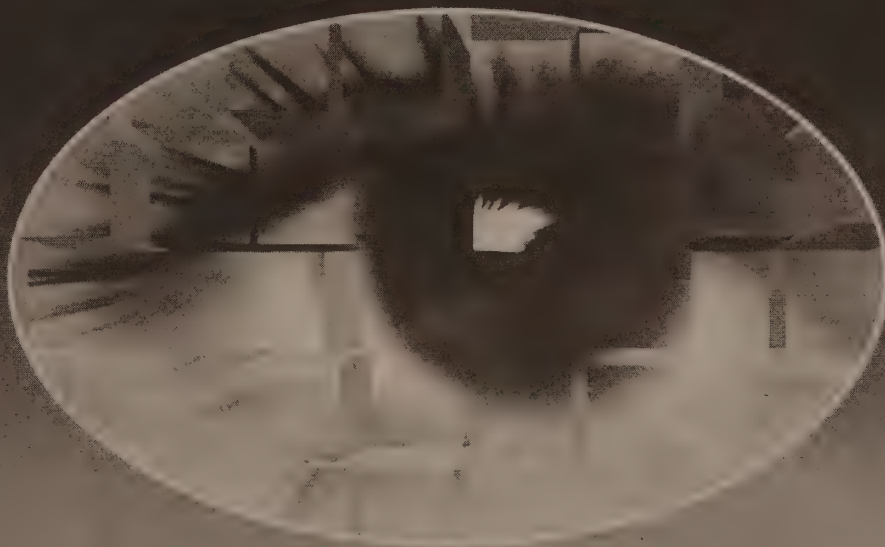

But, of course, it's Gershwin's music which remained the most evocative aspect for the performers. This became clear time and time again when Ms. Haran and Sir Bennett would reveal their affection for the composer, their favorite songs or some cherished fact they had discovered.

Regardless of the subtle, unconscious "filtering" process, the audience was very conscious of the warm rapport that Ms. Haran and Sir Bennett established (a rapport that also applied to the pianist, Scott Dunn, who performed during the first half with Sir Bennett). Spectators were aware, too, of the technical expertise shown by all the performers, including bass player, Linc Milliman.

When all is said and done, however, we are left with one final impression. George Gershwin's songs seem to be about finding resolution, as if he were forever searching for closure. "An Evening of Gershwin" somehow helped with that resolution. ●

jacent.... The golf facility owners have the right to subdivide their property into house lots.... The town is looking into the possibility of purchasing Poxabogue as a town recreational facility."

At a packed ZBA hearing on April 5, Poxabogue's attorney Wayne Bruyn noted that the golf course and driving range on the 22-acre western parcel existed before 1957 and the additional practice tees and parking lot expansion on the eastern parcel had occurred over a period of several years – and the Town has never objected.

Bill Fleming, an East Hampton attorney representing nearby property owner Ronald Lauder (who is opposed to the Poxabogue changes), spoke at the same meeting. According to New York State zoning laws, Fleming said, Poxabogue must meet four criteria for a variance: (1) show they cannot realize a "reasonable return" from the property as it is now zoned; (2) show that it is uniquely suited for its proposed use; (3) show there would not be a detrimental effect on the surrounding neighborhood; and (4) show there is some hardship to the owners if they cannot change the zoning from residential to business use.

The zoning-variance criterion to show hardship for the owners if Poxabogue is not allowed to upgrade will be hard to justify. PGC Property LLC will make a profit if they subdivide both parcels into home lots, but they would prefer to improve the golf facility.

After speaking with the parties involved, researching the zoning, using and observing the use of Poxabogue over several weeks, and noting the high quality of upgrades PGC Property has made since it purchased Poxabogue, it is the position of this reporter and Dan's Papers that it would be a great loss to the majority of residents in both Southampton and East Hampton towns if Poxabogue is turned into two-acre homesites.

We would like the Wainscott/Sagaponack Property Owners group and PGC Property LLC to sit down with a mediator – perhaps Supervisor Cannuscio – and try to come to a reasonable compromise to save this recreational facility.

If this issue is important to you, write now to the Southampton ZBA with your point of view on Poxabogue's application for a variance. The next hearing is set for September 6.

really all about 'schmoozing'. So what did I find out in my casual conversations? Elizabeth Hurley has four new movies coming out by the end of the year...John Corbett, unlike his character Aidan, is definitely not single, (sorry, girls!) and just had his third child. (That was enough to throw me into a depression...I just love him)...Denis Leary's show "The Job" got picked up by ABC and will be up against "The West Wing" this coming fall...Debbie Gibson (who now goes by "Deborah") will be traveling with the National Tour of "Cinderella" starting next week... and, finally, East-ender Star Jones is planning a trip with View Pal Joy Behar, a cruise from Istanbul to Barcelona. I just love Polo Matches...don't you?

Saturday night, I decided to take it easy and went to see "Scary Movie 2" at the Southampton Movie Theater. Now, I don't know about you, but I do not find bathroom jokes, vomiting and slapstick humor funny. This movie was so horrendous that I not only left early, but was tempted to ask the manager for my money back! However, there is some good in everything...did you know that you can now order flavored topping for your popcorn?

POLO 2001

It's over. The Hamptons are on their way out. This was the talk early in the week but no one told that to the organizers or the guests at the opening of the Mercedes Benz Polo matches. A ticket to get into the VIP tent was the object of thousands of phone calls that began or ended with: "Can you get me in?" This year the VIP tent had a VIP tent, which meant being a VIP was still not good enough. In the VIP-VIP area, Elizabeth Hurley looked like a museum piece that said--Look but you cannot get too close--and she seemed to spend the two hours on the phone--maybe giving polo play-by-play back to the UK. Dennis Leary, the other featured celebrity, went on stage to tell the schmoozers to "Shut up!" and pay attention to the auction for his beloved Firefighters Fund. Oh yes, and there were polo matches as well, and White Burch beat Mercedes Benz 14-8. I can understand that. It must have been difficult hitting the ball from the driver's side window of those Mercedes.

PARRISH MUSEUM

The Parrish Museum gala last Saturday began right after polo ended. The Parrish event began with photo-ops near the front door with the Chairs and other Southampton socialites getting flashed-by cameras, of course. Then there was about an hour of cocktails where some guests roamed around saying "Hello" and others, who could not hold out until dinner, gave chase to waiters who carried potatoes with caviar or shrimp cocktails. After cocktails, there was dinner and dancing and then the dessert group joined the party. As in last year's event, there were two dinner dances, one for the traditional with the Steven Scott Orchestra and an Associates dinner with the music of Scott's "Xtreme Team DJ."

SURVIVOR BENEFIT

A summer benefit entitled "SURVIVOR" was held Sunday at The Ark Project in Bridgehampton and was sponsored by Verizon. The event benefits the Child Development Center of the Hamptons (CDCH) Charter School and celebrates the January 2001 opening as the first charter school in Suffolk. The press release states that "Survivor" is a fitting name due to the fact that this new school targets children with disabilities . . . "children who at an early age have learned the art of survival." The fun-filled family event included survivor challenges and a banquet of island food.

By The Glass...

With Susan Simm

President of the New York Wine & Grape Foundation Jim Trezise was presented with the first-ever Distinguished Service Award from the American Society of Enology and Viticulture/Eastern Section at a special dinner on July 13. ASEV is a national organization representing a broad range of industry and academic members throughout the United States and Canada.

The Distinguished Service Award was established to recognize individuals "who have demonstrated outstanding service to the wine and grape industry through teaching, research, extension, entrepreneurship or volunteerism."

Jim became the first recipient of the award based on recommendations from many industry colleagues throughout the U.S. including Robert Mondavi of Mondavi Winery in the Napa Valley.

"I am both honored and humbled by this award," said Trezise, "So I accept this on behalf of the scores of people who have taught and inspired me so much."

Trezise, a resident of the Finger Lakes region in upstate New York, is not as well-known here on Long Island as many others in the industry but he has accomplished much in his devotion to coordinating and centralizing promotion and research program, supporting the industry state-wide. During his 20-year career, he has served on many boards, including the American Vintners Association and the Society of Wine Educators. In addition, he has served as judge at several major wine competitions throughout the country. Former director of the U.S. Information Office of the International Office of Vines and Wines in 1995 based in Paris, he received the Perpetual Monteith Trophy for major contributions to the American wine industry. He was also named by Wines & Vines magazine as one of the top "movers and shakers" of the American wine industry.

Through his lengthy list of achievements, Jim maintains a sense of humor – "I think they chose the wrong person, I'm just a wine guy with a big mouth" – and is delightfully prone to ending his emailed newsletters with quotes like, "I double the doctor's glass and a half of wine, and even treble it with a friend," Thomas Jefferson (and Jim Trezise). A Votre Sante to you, Jim, and may you always set such a wonderful and refreshing example of how not to be a wine snob.

Newcomer Raphael has opened its doors and released its first vintage, simultaneously. The 1997 Merlot represents the varietal that will remain Raphael's signature, with over two-thirds of the 60-acre vineyard planted to it. Owners John and Joan Petrocelli named the winery in honor of John's father and famed winemaker Richard Olsen-Harbich will act as managing director. Mr. Harbich will work with consulting oenologist Paul Pontallier, managing director of Chateau Margaux in Bordeaux. This is the second major European-Long Island connection to occur here on the North Fork, the first, of course, being Castello di Borghese/Hargrave Vineyard. This underscores, yet again, the similarities between the grape growing conditions here on Long Island and those in Europe, France in particular. Raphael opens daily at noon.

Who's Here:

By Susan Simm

"I've never had a job," said Robert Striban recently over coffee at the Cutchogue home he shares with his wife Irma. He is remarkable in many ways, but especially for that ageless quality rarely encountered these days in people who have seen and experienced many things in this world. Here is an artist, a man, who constantly strives to see and interpret the world around him in new ways. Ennui is simply not part of his vocabulary.

Robert became a commercial artist during the '60s, doing work for Fortune magazine and The New York Times on a freelance basis, because it was so difficult to make a living as a fine artist. "But I never gave up creating fine art," said Robert. Just don't confuse freelance, as many people do, with free time. "When you have a lot of work, you work night and day. It's either feast or famine."

Born in the Bronx and raised on the North Shore, Robert used to go sailing with J.P. Morgan's grandson. "When I was growing up in Glen Cove, Morgan was still alive and every season, when the beach opened, he'd come down in his Rolls Royce convertible and he'd buy all the kids ice cream," said Robert. "It was really fun growing up there." Robert even proposed to Irma in Morgan Park and the two still make an annual pilgrimage every year to mark the occasion.

When he was only 17, Robert entered the service and spent 4 impressionable years in China, Burma and India. "I always volunteered for isolated duty and I even painted when I could find the time," he said. "Driving over the Burma Road was one of the greatest experiences of my life and it's had a great effect on my work. That area of the world is so colorful and artistic. In Burma, there was a small village where all the men were completely tattooed, even their fingertips, and the women wore big straw hats, white blouses and black skirts with red cummerbunds. All the women were dressed the same and all the men were in loin cloths with blue tattoos all over their bodies. Seeing all of these striking visual images at such an impressionable age gave me a lifelong love for exotic forms. This reflects itself in my work."

After the service, Robert attended Pratt Institute and The Art Students League on scholarship. He also studied at the New School and it was there that he met his wife, who is also an artist. This was during the 60s. "I fell in love with my wife Irma, a very talented sculptress, at first sight," said Robert.

Currently working in many different media, Robert creates sculptures out of wood, bronze, aluminum, stainless steel, paper and assemblages out of wood aside from drawings and paintings. "My work is really about nature," he said. "I just abstract it." With backgrounds in classical techniques, Robert and Irma both feel that this is important for artists. "Once you develop your skills of drawing and sculpting, you can go in any direction," said Robert. Irma added, "So many people are fudging it in the art world now."

A course at the New School called Visual Fundamentals has had a lasting impact on Robert's work. "The professor would ask us to do something, such as draw a teapot. Then, after we'd draw one, he'd say, 'take white paint and start to paint out what you've drawn but only to a point where you can still recognize the object.' This was really interesting because he taught us how to really see, whatever it was we were drawing, with a minimum of forms. He taught us to see how far we could go without destroying the form that we were seeing and this made us very sensitive to space and how things are aligned there.

"Driving over the Burma Road was one of the greatest experiences of my life and it's had a great affect on my work. That area of the world is so colorful and artistic."

This is a very important aspect of painting and drawing."

The emotional element of art, the feeling, the soul, is fundamental to Robert's work. "No matter how many technical things you learn, without having the feeling and emotion in your work, it's meaningless," said

Robert, who loves Gershwin and Stravinsky because they went "one step beyond." This is what Robert tries to do in his own work and so you will see many different styles reflected in that work. "I'm always searching for new ways of looking at things. I want to grow, to search and find new ways."

Before heading out to Cutchogue in the mid '80s, Robert and Irma owned a farm in upstate New York and later on a place in the Florida Keys, always calling their brownstone in Chelsea home. Introduced to the North Fork in the '70s by an inventor for whom Robert was doing some work, Robert just "fell in love with it."

"This place reminds Bob of how Glen Cove used to be," said Irma. And so they bought a place in Cutchogue and "did the weekend thing until it just became too much of a hassle," she said. "Two houses, two everything. So we just moved out here full time. Little did we know, at that time, that Chelsea would explode into the art center it is today. But here, Bob has his studio and space to work."

Space is indeed important since Robert, who gave up commercial art completely after moving out east full time, was commissioned and recently completed a 45-foot tall revolving aluminum sculpture for a super modern building at the Greenway Plaza Office Park in Melville. "Sam Walton, a prominent builder and developer, and his son Stuart were in the process of completing their third building at Greenway when I was recommended to them as an artist who was well-known for his original and innovative work," said Robert. "The Waltons had created a stunning, contemporary lobby and wanted a striking sculpture that would enhance the architecture."

"The design of the lobby intrigued me. There was an atrium that was fifteen feet below the lobby floor and the entire interior was open and rose to a height of over 50 feet, from the base of the atrium to the ceiling of the third floor. My mind racing, armed with blueprints, measurements and ideas, I returned to my studio where I conceived a 45-foot sculpture that would spin slowly on a turntable, casting shadows and patterns on the white wall behind it."

The Waltons were so impressed with Robert's work, in addition to granting him the commission (there were additional entries), they also commissioned him to create two more sculptures, for Buliding Two, where Senator Schumer was to have his office. This would be the first time a senator from New York would have his office on Long Island.

For this project, Robert created two 12-foot high aluminum sculptures that would be cantilevered off the wall outside of the senator's office. After they were installed, media and political luminaries from all over the island attended and Robert was presented with a special award from the Suffolk County Legislature.

Just as the first sculpture was completed and installed, Robert asked Irma to take a ride with him so that he could take some pictures. "I didn't see it until it was completed," said Irma. "The building wasn't even completed yet. But when I saw it for the first time, it was just awe-inspiring. It was like seeing the World's Fair!" she said.

"To construct these sculptures, I chose North Fork Welding. I had worked with them before and I knew they had the technical knowledge and ingenuity to handle a project of this magnitude," said Robert. "The entire project took almost a year. The 45-foot sculpture had to be transported in three sections and installed on sight with a scissors lift."

Robert had worked with metal before this project and, in fact, three of his large metal sculptures are currently on exhibit in Amagansett at Artists' Woods, a fabled property that was acquired in 1946 by surrealist painter Lucia and her son Alexander Kabbaz. It has been the studio/gallery/home for many 20th century artists rendered homeless by World War II and is open Memorial Day-

Labor Day. (Call 267-7909.)

In a private collection on Nassau Point, two more of Robert's metal sculptures grace the waterfront. "I call them light machines because, as the sun moves from east to west, it casts patterns and changes the whole look of the sculptures. If you were to photograph one of those sculptures every hour as the light changes, you'd see a completely different work." Irma is also delighted with Robert's success here on their home turf. "The Museum of Modern Art comes to the North Fork!" she said.

On the rural and tranquil nature of the North Fork, Robert muses, "The thing that I like most about it here is that every road eventually leads to the water. There is such a variety of nature: the change of the seasons, the colors and forms, the shapes of the trees. All of these are a constant inspiration to me. Every day I wake up it looks different, and I love it here."

Corn: More Than Meets The Eye (Or Ear)

By Susan Simm

There is a saying about the Midwest in general, and Iowa, in particular: the corn there "grows as high as an elephant's eye." Since Eastern Long Island has some of the best soil in the country, why isn't our corn blocking the view of the proverbial pachyderm? Well, it's because we growing different varieties of corn than the farmers in the Midwest do. And, more importantly, most of the corn that you see as you travel around the East End is sweet corn.

There are hundreds, maybe thousands of different corn varieties. Basically, there is sweet corn or the corn that we eat and there is field corn, which is used to make feed for animals. Corn is part of the grass family which is why went the plants are very small, it looks like a field of precisely planted crabgrass.

Several of the local farmers grow field corn for two main reasons. First, it is a good crop to rotate with potatoes. If the farmer wants to improve his potato yield, one of the best ways is to not plant potatoes on a field for one season. Instead, he could plant field corn, which he can sell to the feed manufacturing plant in Moriches (where they make much of the commercial duck feed for the few duck growers that remain in business). He enjoys the advantage of growing a crop that he might make a little money on and, more importantly, the ground is "rested" so that next year, he can plant potatoes and (hopefully) harvest a bumper crop. This is the corn that can be compared to the Midwest varieties.

The second reason is that field corn puts a lot of organic matter back into the soil. Some crops, potatoes being one of them, use large amounts of nutrients found in the soil and breaks down the soil's structure. Field corn, on the other hand, uses much less of the available nutrients and because all those big stalks and leaves are tilled back into the ground after harvest, soil structure and organic matter improve.

Sweet corn comes in many different varieties as well, but the important distinctions for corn lovers are whether the corn is a sugary, sugar enhanced or supersweet variety. The main difference between the three is how fast the sugar in the kernels turn to starch.

The old adage for great tasting corn was to have the water boiling before you went out to pick the corn. That's because the old-fashioned varieties are in the sugary category. The sugar in these ears starts to turn to starch immediately. So you had to eat the corn ASAP or it didn't taste very good.

An improvement was made about twenty years ago, when new (at the time) varieties were developed in the sugar-enhanced category. This corn held its sugar content for about one day before turning into starch and when the corn was eaten the day it was picked, the flavor and sweetness were exceptional compared to the sugary varieties.

Then, about ten years ago, another new type of corn arrived on the scene. Supersweet corn was developed so that large corn growers in the south could harvest a crop, pack it into refrigerated trucks with lots of ice on top and ship it to the large Northern cities, particularly for the major barbecuing holidays like Memorial Day and 4th of July. The starch in the supersweet corn doesn't break down for days. That's why corn from the supermarket started tasting better all of a sudden. Supersweet corn created a niche for the southern farmers.

Locally, almost all the sweet corn planted is the sugar-enhanced variety. Farmers and farmstand operators pick the corn fresh daily anyway, so they are satisfied with the holding ability of the enhanced corn. However, a few growers are now planting more and more supersweet.

There are subtle differences between the two types of corn:

Sugar-enhanced generally has smaller, softer kernels. The pericarp or cap of the kernel is easy to bite off the cob and the flavor is sweeter than traditional corn, but still retains that "corny" taste while supersweet has an extremely sweet flavor. Some people feel that this latter variety is too sweet and that it has no corn flavor. Additionally, the pericarp is tougher than on sugar-enhanced or traditional varieties. The texture in your mouth tends to be very crunchy when the corn is cooked properly. Supersweet fans argue that you don't have to worry about whether the corn will taste good because supersweet always does. Which is better? It's a personal preference thing. Try them both and decide for yourself.

Now that you know the basics of East End corn, when you are driving down the road, how can you tell them apart? There are several ways. First, if you see a field where corn is planted in small sections so that there is tall corn that is ready to pick and shorter corn close by, that is a sweet corn field. Farmers plant sweet corn every few days so that they have a steady supply for their farmstands all season.

Field corn is planted all at once. If you come upon a large field where all the corn is the same size, it is probably field corn. Additionally, field corn is harvested in the late fall, so the plants don't actually have ears on them until mid to late summer. The sweet corn harvest start as close to the 4th of July as the farmers can get and continues until well into fall, with some farmers picking their last corn plantings around Halloween.

Another way to tell field and sweet corn apart is the size of the plants and, later on, the ears. Field corn stalks grow to be 8 to 10 feet tall whereas sweet corn stalks are 6 to 8 feet in height. Tall sweet corn is not a desirable trait because tall stalks make it difficult to protect the ears from pests.

Sweet corn ears are normally 8 - 10 inches long, with an ear that measures one foot in length being an exception. Field corn ears are 10 to 14 inches long and are much larger in girth and heft.

Finally, field corn is not sprayed. All of the pesticides, with rare exceptions, are applied at planting. The farmer is not nearly as concerned about corn worms attacking field corn ears and besides, damage usually is minimal.

Sweet corn, however, is sprayed several times per week. This is because the moths that produces the corn ear worms flutter around the corn field constantly, trying to lay their eggs on the corn's silk. The moth lays more eggs and they hatch faster as the weather gets warmer so farmers must stay on top of these pests or when you husk your corn for supper, you may have a "surprise" in one or more of the ears.

Lefty Flounder? It's A Fluke!

By Sandra Dumais

It's a balmy spring day in June, and there's barely a breath of air. Your boat is just west of Jessup Neck in Little Peconic Bay. You can feel your sinker dragging along the sand and cobble bottom as your boat slowly drifts west on the incoming tide. There are about 30 other boats drifting down the bay with you, each with eager fishermen anticipating a nibble on the line.

Just as you start to nod off with the heat, you feel a sharp tug on your line. You lift your rod up sharply and get another strong tug - hooked up! You reel in and your buddy lowers the net over the size to scoop up a huge 5 pound "door-mat" - a beautiful example of the summer flounder or fluke.

Fluke Are Left Handed Fish

Summer flounder or fluke, (Paralichthys dentatus) are found from Maine to Florida in bays, estuaries and the ocean in depths up to 656 feet. Fluke are a species of left handed flounder, which means if you hold the fish vertically with its head pointing away from you, its dark or "top" side will be in your left hand. Their left side is colored tan to dark brown with numerous spots and their right ("bottom") side is white. They have a remarkable ability to change coloration to match their surroundings, even to the extent of changing the pattern of their skin to match a cobble bottom. Summer flounder have large mouths with many sharp teeth. They normally can reach a size of 36 inches and weigh 15 pounds. Fish as large as 25 pounds have been recorded.

Summer flounder are found in Long Island's bays, estuaries and nearshore ocean waters from May through October. They migrate to deeper offshore waters in October through April. Summer flounder reach reproductive maturity at 2 years of age. Females are generally bigger than males and are approximately 14 and 12 inches respectively when they are age 2. Fecundity (the number of eggs) varies with the size of the fish. A 14-inch female produces 460,000 eggs while a 27-inch female can have as many as 4 million eggs. Off of Long Island, spawning occurs primarily during October through December, although it can extend into February and March. Spawning occurs when water temperatures drop below 54°F. Eggs and sperm are broadcast into the water column where fertilization occurs.

Larvae Undergo Metamorphosis

The eggs are pelagic and range in size for 0.9 millimeters (mm) to 1.1mm (0.04 inches). The eggs hatch in 2 to 9 days depending on the temperature and the larvae range in size from 2.4-2.8 mm (0.1 inches). At first they have unpigmented eyes and undeveloped mouths. By the time they reach 10 mm (0.39 inches), their fins are fully developed. Survival of the larvae depends upon the time it takes them to begin feeding. If the larvae have not begun feeding 6 to 7 days after hatching, they will die. Larval feeding rate and growth are directly related to temperature.

Until the larvae reach a size of 13 mm (0.5 inches) they look just like a normal fish with one eye on each side of their head. At this stage, they undergo metamorphosis, the eye on the right side of the head migrates over to the left side. The time it takes for this process to occur depends on water temperature, with colder temperature resulting in longer metamorphosis periods. During this period, the larvae migrate into coastal estuaries and bays where the fish assume a benthic (bottom dwelling) existence. Larvae are first found in Long Island coastal waters in January through March. The transition from larvae to juveniles progresses until the fish is 27 mm (1.06 inches) in size when scale formation is complete and adult pigmentation is apparent.

Summer Flounder Are Active Visual Hunters

Juveniles grow rapidly and can reach a size of 12

inches by September of their first year. During this time they remain within estuaries and bays in a variety of higher salinity (greater than 12 ppt) habitats including subtidal march creeks, eelgrass beds, algae beds, and unvegetated, sandy habitats. Many larger juveniles move up into subtidal creeks during the flood tide to feed and move out as the tide ebbs. Young fluke feed on amphipods, grass shrimp, benthic worms, crabs and small fish. In the fall, these fish move out of the estuaries to deeper water offshore with the adults. Adults prey upon fish, squid and small crabs. Summer flounder are active visual hunters, stalking their prey. Their eyes can move independent of each other to allow a wide field of vision. Typical of all the flounders, summer flounder exhibit various methods of movement. They can swim just above the bottom by undulating their entire body, lunge forward with astonishing speed over short distances, or glide slowly along the sand on their fin rays.

Fluke are preyed upon by numerous organisms aside from humans. Young fish are preyed upon by blue fish, striped bass, weakfish and adult summer flounder. Cormorant, egrets, herons and harbor seals also feed on fluke. Predation is not the only source of mortality however. Pollution is often associated with the occurrence of fin rot disease. Fin rot is a disease that causes the fins to erode and is generally associated with poor water quality.

Summer flounder are caught by both commercial and recreational fishermen. Recreational fishermen use a combination of squid, killifish and silversides to catch fluke. They can be caught from a boat or from jetties at inlets. Summer flounder have nice white fillets and are a favorite table fare. The fillets can be cooked plain or breaded. An excellent recipe for fluke involves drying the fillets in cornstarch, dipping in egg, rolling in flour or plain bread crumbs then frying in oil. They are also great in cold fluke sandwiches.

Sandra Dumais came to Long Island from Maine, and now works on habitat and marine resources projects with the Cornell Cooperative Extension of Suffolk County's Marine Program. # Shop 'til You Drop...With Maria Tennariello

This is indeed shopping weather so my mom and I did plenty of it this weekend. Let's do some shopping.

This is the time of the year that you get that flag flying on your lawn and boat. Nautique National Flag on Montauk Highway in Westhampton Beach is filled to the rafters with "Flagpoles of Distinction", for just that reason. They have a large selection of flags and banners (U.S. Marine, foreign, historic and fun ones), custom flags and burgees, weathervanes and cupolas in a multitude of designs in solid copper. Nautique is a flagpole specialist and they install, repair, maintenance. They will also do site consultations.

Hope you have your rock n' roll shoes polished for this one. At the Westhampton Performing Arts Theatre in Westhampton Beach, there is a Rock n' Roll show with Johnny Maestro and the Brooklyn Bridge, Stan Ziska's Del Vikings and The Encounters. This performance, Thursday, July 26, 7 p.m. is for a great cause, to benefit The Suffolk County Special Olympics. The show was promoted by Rocco Oliverio of The Real Estate Store, so call for your tickets now because they are rollin' out the door! Call 653-5570. See you there!

Are you looking for a great buy on landscape construction? At Hampton Nursery on Montauk Highway in Hampton Bays, you can double your planting with ground cover junipers...Buy one, get one free. Here they also do consultations, free estimates and complete design installation. Call 728-1160.

At Kazdin Pools on North Highway in Southampton they are offering the Marquis Spa with free delivery, cover, ozonator, start up chemicals and instructions. I think I need this. Dan, I think I need a raise!

If it's time to replace that sagging mattress for that aching back, it's time to check out the mattress sale at Sleepy's located on Montauk Highway in Bridgehampton. They will not take no for an answer here by offering you a deal of deals. Bring in any department or furniture store's sale invoice or coupon and take an extra 20% off the price. What a deal that is.

At Complements Lingerie on Main Streets, Bridgehampton and Southampton look for great bathing suits, wraps, robes, lingerie and much more. Lots of major brand names here.

At The Down Factory Store At the Elegant John at The Red Horse Market in East Hampton, you should stock up on lamps this season because there is an entire inventory lamp sale going on right now. Regularly $225, pick them up at $144.99. What a bargain!

I know one thing; I'm calling East End Clam Bakes for my son Randy and his family's visit this weekend. They do the work and we will have the fun. East End Clam Bakes will cater your casual beach parties or elegant affairs at your home. This won't be elegant, just family fun. Call 631-726-6351 for information.

Heading home, I stopped off in my town, Sag Harbor for a look at Devonian on Main Street. This store has it all going on. I found some great rugs, carpeting, hand made signs that say, Sag Harbor, Bridgehampton, Southampton, Love Shack, etc. You can have anything you want in a decorative sign made here. There are beautiful prints, throw pillows, lamps, birdhouses and unusual eclectic home furnishings. Kim the owner will also make you a one-of-a-kind personal house gift for that special person you are visiting out here in the Hamptons. Call her at 725-7511.

Right across the street at Satori I found the wildest looking glitter shoes, rhinestone belts, bags and accessories to match for every occasion. There is a fabulous collection of ladies clothing to die for here. Check it out!

Nearby at Sylvester & Co. you will find a cool collection of doggie and pet bowls and accessories, great gifts not to mention the delicious coffees, hot and iced to go along with the delicious cakes and cookies! That's a hot secret.

Time to go home. My drive past Long Beach around sunset is the best of the best in my book. How lucky can a gal get? What a day, what a job!

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Summer Shopping!

GOLFING

Islands End: Quality Golf And Sea Breezes

Islands End golf course, situated on Route 25 in Greenport, has a very relaxed mature feel to it, as it should having been in operation since 1961 when the first nine hole opened. These were soon followed by a second nine, which, in fact, became the front nine and the original holes now form the back nine of a course that is kept in immaculate condition from the fairways to the greens. The floral plantings add a nice touch around tee areas and bring in a country club atmosphere. By the way, even the bunkers are well looked after, as I can personally assure you having visited a few of them during our round. Seriously, it was a pleasure to have sand that you could trust and let your sand wedge do its job of depositing your ball on the green, where it should have been in the first place anyway!

The course is very fair to golfers in that the majority of trouble you get in is your own fault. Driving areas off the tee are generous and if you work the ball right to left this certainly is an advantage as on many holes the place not to be is down the right.

The course plays 6639 yards from the back tees and 6274 from the white tees with the front nine being shorter than the back. The layout is somewhat unconventional as there are five par 3s and five par 5s on the course. The par 3s are exceptionally good ones and range from 163 to 212 yards from the back tees, which we decided to play on a day with little wind but a threat of a thunderstorm. This is a course where the wind can play a major part on many of the holes, particularly those close up to the Sound. The best tip for when the wind does blow is to play very conservatively and within yourself for high wind will always accentuate any incorrect spin on a golf ball so a gentle fade becomes a giant slice! You are always better off if your swing is relaxed, rather than trying to force the ball.

Although the fairways are pleasantly wide, many of the holes pose problems with approach shots into greens with narrow openings, that are well guarded by bunkers. Also, when you are on the greens, they are very true but very tricky especially if they dry out and become fast, for there are many undulations and saddlebacks, which will deflect your ball from its objective.

Apart from the 18th, a long 465 yard par 4 from the back tees and 437 from the whites and which may well deserve the No.1 handicapping rather than being classed No.2, all of the par 4s should be reachable in regulation. Again though, you must place your tee shot in the correct half of the fairway to get a clear shot into the greens.

Among the best of the holes are all of the par 3's. My playing notes comment on the fact that even when on the green on the 3rd you will do well to get down in two.

The 5th has a very narrow entrance throat into a saddleback green with bunkers waiting to catch a mishit. The green on the 7th also was noted as being tricky especially with certain pin placements. The gem of the par 3s and indeed of the course has to be the much photographed 210 yard 16th where you stand on the tee with Long Island Sound beside you and on a clear day a view right across to Connecticut. The green is below you and you must hit over a ravine to be on it and it is not easy to stop your ball on the green. This must be a fun hole to play when the wind is blowing strongly from the southwest and I was not sure if whoever put up the notice which admonishes golfers "not to hit balls into the Sound" had a very sick sense of humor. Anyway, my golfing companion is obviously one who delights in flouting authority for he promptly drove off the tee and disregarded the notice!

The last four holes are very fine ones to close a round and the 18th is a particularly good finishing hole. This is not one most would want to face needing a par to win or to complete a good scoring round.

The facilities at Island's End are very good, as befits a club that seems to have very effectively blended the needs of members with those of casual visitors to the club. In general tee times are more readily available in the afternoons for non-members. We had to break from our round because of a short but intense thunderstorm and while sheltering in the dining room we admired the quality of the breakfast being served but being devoted to finishing our survey of the course we resisted the temptation – at least until our next visit. This is a course well worth playing and revisiting because it provides good golf and good facilities at a realistic price.

Enjoy golf in the great Scottish tradition. Kilt optional.

Set on the north shore of Long Island lies New York's newest links-style golf experience – Tallgrass Golf Club. ## EPISODE 9:

Zarda Bot

by Dan Rattiner

"You are getting Zarda Bot?" Pangborne asked, his eyes widening.

"That's right," Sampson said. "Zarda Bot."

The other three men at the table leaned forward to hear more. But there wasn't any more.

"Alison arranged it," he said. He waved a hand. "She knows someone who knows someone. Just mark the date. Cocktails and dinner. July 21. Benefits the National Botched Face Lift Research Society. Bring your checkbooks."

Then Sampson picked up his club sandwich. It was always what he ordered after morning tennis, and he took a bite. The club always had the same boring menu.

A week later, the invitations went out. "I don't have to tell you about Zarda Bot," Liz Smith wrote in the New York Post. "Daughter of a Dutch gas station attendant. Brought to America at 17 as the upstairs maid for the Gleason family. Married Gleason after his divorce. Shot him in the head while he slept a year later. Then, in that sensational trial, got off, her lawyer showing how the DNA evidence had been mishandled. After that, she skunked the Gleason family out of their inheritance. Then lost it to the Mafia after opening a competing extortion racket. Quite a girl. And being introduced to the Hamptons by Fairfield and Alison Sampson on July 21."

The evening after that column came out, as Sampson and his wife Alison were dressing for dinner, Fairfield began to have second thoughts.

"Maybe we should have gotten that young protoge. The one who won the gold medal in Moscow and then did that award winning score for THE DRIFTERS Tom Cruise starred in. Howard said he could get us either of them."

"You think we're making a mistake?"

"At least this boy has accomplished something."

"Zarda Bot has accomplished something," Alison said. "Her new book WHAT THEY'VE DONE TO ME is out. She was on the cover of People Magazine. She has her own fragrance. A condom tied to the bottle with a pink ribbon."

"I guess it's SOMETHING."

"The Daily News says our party will be the fundraiser of the summer. Anyway, the invitations have gone out."

The invitations may have gone out, but on the morning of the party, they ceased to be accurate. Fairfield and Alison were standing by the pool, watching the party planner instruct Roberto up on a ladder stringing lantern lights.

Zarda's advance men, three of them, wandered over. They wore black sunglasses, black suits, shiny black shoes with shoulder holsters. They also wore earpieces that had black coiled wires attached in the back. The wires went inside their collars.

"Zarda says no face lift charity," one of them said, pointing to the invitation.

"Zarda has her own charity."

"What's that?" Fairfield asked.

"Zarda," the man said.

"Okay," Fairfield said.

The caterers arrived at three and began setting up under the tent. The waitstaff arrived at four, the valet parking people at five, the band at five thirty and the paparazi at five forty five. It was going to be a beautiful evening.

The first of the expected three hundred guests arrived at ten to six. There were two bars, one at each end of the giant tent. In between, there was the band and the dance floor. The tables, decorated with the be-ribboned fragrance bottles, formed a horseshoe around the dance floor. And on every chair was a gift bag containing Zarda's new book, her line of vinyl women's underwear and Zarda cigarette lighters, key chains and paperweights.

Fairfield and Alison shook the hands of the first guests, smiled and motioned them off to one of the bars.

"Zarda here yet?" they asked.

More guests arrived. Then, as the band began to play, two black vans pulled up. Eight beautiful women poured out of the back of one, each wearing a see through raincoat with nothing under it, and carrying a spray can of AMSTERDAM toilet water, which they sprayed on all the tables. Out of the other van poured a dozen men in black turtle necks who arranged themselves at the exits. All of them had shaved heads. And all of them, in unison, folded their arms over their shoulder holsters. Zarda was coming.

More and more guests arrived. Waiters carrying hors d'oeuvres, white wine and champagne moved among them.

"When is Zarda coming?" the Whitfields asked Sampson.

"She's coming," he grinned.

But the time passed, and Zarda did not come. People had a good time though. They danced, they stood around in groups. They drank. Many of them went to the buffet tables when the serving dishes were brought out, then brought the food back to the tables and ate.

Governor and Mrs. Pataki arrived about seven forty and some of the Papparazzi, tired of standing around waiting for Zarda, took pictures of them, alone, and then together with the Sampsons.

"Where's Zarda?" the Governor asked.

"Oh, she'll be here," Sampson said. "All her advance people are here." He waved his arms at the guards at the exits.

The Governor looked at his watch. The party would end in twenty minutes. He would shortly have to chopper out to a

Then, with just five minutes before the official end of the party, a large crowd of screaming and shouting people began to push their way into the tent entrance. Cameras flashed, mikes on booms overhead swayed.

As one, three hundred people stood up and began to applaud. They cheered and they continued to applaud as this wriggling mass of people with all the cameras clicking and flashing pushed its way up to the front of the tent, then, in a strange turn of events, pushed its way toward the side of the tent and out into the darkness where they disappeared. The crowd stood on its tiptoes, craned their necks and cheered and applauded even more. Then they sat down.

"Wow," Chet Bakersfield said to Sampson.

"Wasn't she something," Mrs. Bakersfield said. "Did you see her? She had all those body piercings. And orange hair."

"Wow," Bakersfield said again.

"Where is that doctor from the botched face lift place?" Fairfield asked. "Get him up there to make a speech."

* * *

The last guests finally left around ten o'clock. Fairfield and Alison stood around, watching the swirl of the busboys picking up the remains of the event.

Daughter Jennifer wandered over. There was a worried look on her face. "I didn't see Zarda," she said, "but those naked women in the raincoats, a lot of them went up in your bedroom, mom. They cleaned out your closets."

"What?"

"Took all your clothes. The Guccis, the Hermes, everything. Threw them right out the window to a truck below."

"They have my clothes?" Alison said.

"That's GREAT. Zarda's going to wear my clothes. The Alison collection."

"Maybe so."

14 year old Willy wandered over. "Look what I got," he said, holding up a condom. "One of the bald headed guys autographed it."

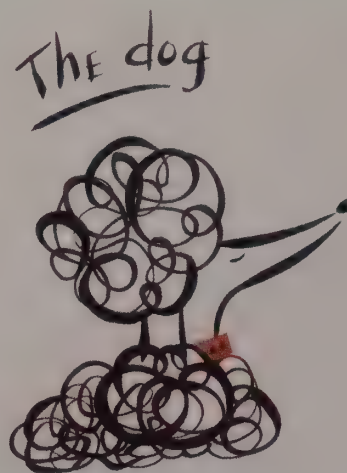

In the morning, Caressa served the family breakfast with plastic cups, forks and spoons.

"Very sorry," she said. "All the silver gone. The crystal too."

"Wow," Jennifer said. "Isn't that something."

"We raised almost two hundred thousand dollars for charity," Sampson said. "Have any reporters called?"

"Just three," Caressa said. She poured them coffee. "Many bullet holes in the kitchen."

What's Hot Who's Hot

by Katlean de Monchy

LEGENDS OF THE FALL—
CHANEL by KARL LAGERFELD

On inspiration - "it is everything and nothing - I stay in the spirit of what I think Chanel could be."

The creative process - "it is done by instinct"

On the collection - "the black dresses - they're romantic with embroideries like Kenneth Nolan paintings"

"and the sweatshirts are something for the snow but not just for the snow."

Are you a skier? "I'm not a skier but I also don't wear cocktail dresses but can design them. Skiwear can be worn in the city, in the country, on a motorbike."

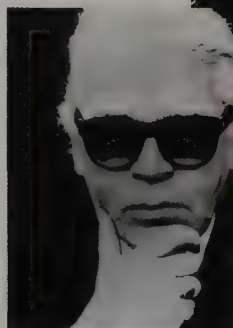

On new proportions: "larger shoulders and short jackets, with fitted or flaired, the collection is about flexibility and movement and with graphic design.

Skirts are shorter and it is logical to put boots with them and focus on feet"

Chanel in the Hamptons - "the Hamptons are beautiful like Deauville or Biarritz but these resorts do not require a special outfit"

Accessories - "this time it's the bag with two pistols"

Do you shop? - "I don't shop just because I have no time - I do not want to see what exists already - I have to see something else."

"Must-haves"

By Jill Martin

Ever feel like just cuddling up on the couch and watching a movie? If your answer is "all the time" (like me) you can't miss out on this must-have. Both comfortable and chic, Joy and Jake's colorful cuddlies will have your dates asking, "where did you get those... pillows?"
Available by calling 1.888.joy.jake

When throwing a dinner party you always strive to be the consummate host, don't you? Well, Inca has done it again, and now, so can you. These peacock-embroidered placemats will have your guests flapping their feathers at your colorful dining displays! The only problem will be getting your appreciative guests to leave. (Set of 4, $85)
Available at Keesal and Matthews, East Hampton. 631.324.8405

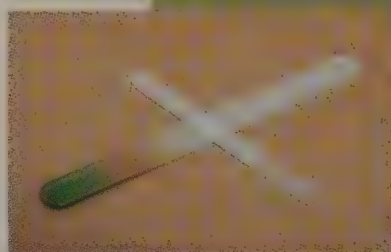

My cousin Gail is always asking, "Does this go with that ...Does this match?" Well, Saks Fifth Avenue has answered Gail's and yours as well. They now provide personal shoppers (gratis!, I must add) to anyone that needs some advice from a style-savvy professional. There is even a beautifully decorated, champagne-filled room upstairs designated for the personal shop-ee! What a great experience...May Boilen made me feel like Pretty Woman!
Saks Fifth Avenue, Southampton 631.283.350

Men, if this year is the year...do it right. This 8.32-karat ring from McCarver and Moser is sure to ensure a "yes" from your loved one. This fancy yellow starburst will definitely knock her socks off! The only problem...you'll also need someone to help hold her hand up! (A mere $258,000) Available at McCarver and Moser 631.324.7300

This summer it is all about going incognito. The only thing sexier than a 2-piece bathing suit is one with a touch of camouflage. The only challenge you'll have is chasing off the army of men fighting for your attention. By Inca ($145)
Available at Georgina, East Hampton. 631.907.0670

Imagine owning something that lasts forever? These crystal nail files (handmade in Russia) will not wear down and carry a lifetime guarantee. I wish everything in my life had these qualities! # Haley Lieberman of the Hamptons

& South Beach

Did this amazing beauty with her heartwarming smile catch your eye? Well, you'd better put on your hard hat... this young lady is ready to take on New York. Aside from going down to Florida to help with marketing and PR of her father's newest hotels, The Chelsea and The Whitelaw, Haley's line of work is very similar to her father's. At age 25 she bought an old rubber-manufacturing warehouse in Tribeca which she now renovating so she can sell as lofts. "Construction begins August 1st," she says, "but it's really hard when you working on a project and the contractor won't look you in the eye because you're a woman." Haley hires all the contractors and engineers for the projects she takes on. When she's not working, Haley likes to de-stress with yoga and dreams about doing hotels in New York some day. With her motto, "You have to discover what you love to do on a day to day basis," catching that dream is not too far out of Haley's reach. Catching Haley isn't either!

The Best 7th Hole

(SEMI-PRIVATE & PUBLIC COURSES)
as selected by Long Island golfers

The 7th hole at Great Rock Golf Club in Wading River has been voted the Best 7th Hole on any Public Golf Course on Long Island's East End, by the readers of Dan's Papers.

498 Yards

Proceed with Caution

Our first repeat winner in the Elite 18 competition, Great Rock offers a double dogleg seventh hole that is complete with elevation changes, blind shots and bunkers guarding the prime landing areas on each side of the fairway. Though the hole has two significant bends to it, if you hit the ball exceedingly straight twice you have a shot at a big payoff as the close hole measures under 500 yards from the back tees. But these two shots will shave the tree-lined fairways by the narrowest margins, and in the case of the tee shot must also clear a mound of swirling fescue.

BLOWN AWAY

"Mayday! Mayday! This is the Orange Crush. We have run aground at Nassau Point and are caught in a thunderstorm. Mayday! Mayday!"

The morning did not start with this disaster. It began with beauty and a promise of a memorable sail, from Strong's Marina in Mattituck to the Montauk Yacht Club. With coercion and a bribe of gas money, my son Jeff drove us at dawn to the dock and by 6:47 A.M. we were motoring eastward towards a brilliant red sun, just peaking over Robin's Island. Wind, tide and it seems like the gods were with us as we headed into Little Peconic Bay. In the back of my head I heard a soft rhyme... red sky in the morning, sailor take warning. Red sky at night, sailor's delight. But I shook it off by gazing at the blue sky to the east. The west offered a haze and dark clouds in the distance.

Debbie handled the tiller as I prepared to raise the sails. Then she asked about a line of small waves, just off our bow. "It's nothing," I assured her, "just a shelf, where there's deep water on one side and a different depth on the other."

That's when we hit the sandbar, with a soft thud. The shelf went from 8 feet in the channel to 2 feet over the sand and we were hard aground. The engine, anchors and me in the water pushing hard convinced me to call Towboat U.S. Cell phones are wonderful and right after we hung up, Renee, Debbie's daughter, called. She just got to work in Medford and they were having a roaring thunderstorm. She heard it was coming our way.

It was. A towering black wall of clouds was roaring up from the southwest accompanied by deep rumbles of thunder. Every three or four seconds, portions of the black sky would light up and glow. When it reached Robin's Island, bolts of whitish blue lightning started connecting with the ground. The wind picked up and the pounding waves it generated threw us further onto the sandbar, increasing our heel. Soon we were leaned over past 30 degrees, huddled inside our cabin, peeking out at the approaching storm.

A solid wall of chaos hit us. The wind howled at over 50 miles an hour and rain, hail and the storm's fury heeled us over more. We were nearly standing on the side of the cabin, like something out of the Poseidon Adventure. Wild noise was everywhere, the waves crashing on our upturned hull, the wind howling through the shrouds, hail bouncing off the deck and deafening booms of the thunder. Deb was positive we were going to die. I was more worried about the boat, figuring we were stranded on a sandbar that ran right to the shore. We could always hop out and walk to Nassau Point.

Then the storm got worse. From the windward side, there was only the black of the storm through the cabin windows. The leeward showed only water, getting closer and closer as we were tilted ever more severely. That's when we called the Coast Guard on VHF channel 9 and immediately they answered, first the Long Island Sound command and then the Shinnecock Station. Help was on the way.

By 9:20 AM the storm was over. It roared eastward, destined to pound Southold, Greenport and Orient. We scrambled out of the cabin and quickly surveyed Crush. Heavily heeled over but not a scratch. To the south we saw a Coast Guard boat coming and within minutes Bosom mate 3rd class Ben Richards and Seaman Matt Adamchak had us aboard their 20 footer.

It seems doctors, policemen and now rescuers are getting younger and younger each day. BM3 Richards was a bit over twenty and Matt could have come right from a row in my high school English class. They were wonderful, waiting with us for the towboat to arrive. Ben offered Deb his jacket and told us stories about his days working on a cutter off Miami. Beside drug interdiction duty, his ship helped transport El Duque to the United States, when the Yankee pitcher first defected from Cuba.

Southold Bay Constable Don Dzenkowski and Kent McCarthy arrived on the scene. They heard our maydays and came out to check on our situation. Soon Towboat US from Orient arrived and within a minute of the rope being tied to the cleat, we were pulled free. The first thing I did when I purchased Crush was to take out the unlimited towing insurance from Towboat US. For $99.00 it was a bargain. I didn't know it would be a lifesaver.

The morning was still quite young, 10:40 AM, and we were on our way again, motoring against the light wind, towards Shelter Island. The waves were gentle, the sky clear, the sun warm and the beauty we saw on our trip was breath taking. Once we left Sag Harbor, the winds picked up and we spent the afternoon gently gliding by Thee Mile Harbor and Gardiner's Island.

By dinner we arrived at the Montauk Yacht Club, greeted on radio by Victoria Rudolph, marina office supervisor. Warm showers and a wonderful room awaited us, with the resort staff upgrading our reservation to a courtyard room. It was spacious and incredibly comfortable. We both could not believe the drama and twists this Wednesday gave us.

Thursday brought a whirl of excitement, with Victoria, Sharon, their sales director, and Joseph Lanza, the food director at the Yacht Club, delivering champagne and congratulation signs to the dock. My two children, Jeff and Erin, and Debbie's daughter Renee drove out and at noon Retired Judge James Ketchum arrived and pronounced us husband and wife, as we all stood aboard the Crush, at slip 322.

The Montauk Yacht Club was our wonderful honeymoon playground for the next few days, as we enjoyed their indoor and outdoor pools, lounge chairs and wonderful facilities. The first night their shuttle bus got us to Lenny's for dinner and back. The next evening we strolled the docks, admiring and just plain gawking at the huge yachts that dominated their waterfront. These came from up and down the East Coast, with the largest being the Morgan Star, a 120 foot cruise ship tied up at the north end of their huge marina.

Over the weekend we stayed aboard the Crush and sailed a bit, mostly enjoying the perfect weather. Facilities at the Montauk Yacht Club were clean and well situated, on the first floor of the dock master's building. The showers were hot and the waiting short. Downtown Montauk was a quick drive away and we enjoyed dancing at both Nick's and Sheebens, forgetting for a while that we were old enough to the parents of most of the people there.

The two-month voyage of the Orange Crush has had moments of exhilaration, serenity, comfort, confusion and now both pure terror and great happiness, for the ship that has gotten us half way around this island has also seen us come together. We have been blown away by the wind, the tides and by our love for each other.

Crush will be in Montauk for the next several weeks, enjoying the fine food and spirit of this great seafaring town. Star Island Yacht Club is our next port of call and after that we will be tied up at the Montauk Coast Guard Station, reporting on the activities of those who work to keep us all safe on the unforgiving seas. May the winds be gentle, the food fine and your smiles wide.

Pursuit 3070: Fishing Machine For The 21st Century

By Ben Amato

21st century deep-sea fishing is a wild combination of high tech hardware, primitive hunting savvy and raw power. Strong's Marina invited me to ride aboard a Pursuit 3070, a center console futuristic fishing machine, as its crew went out on a Makomania fishing tournament. We would be hunting sharks.

Dawn over Shinnecock Inlet had a red glow to it, with dozens of sleek powerful boats slowly circling around the buoy on the bay side of the opening. Captain Dennis was at the controls, idling the twin Yamaha 250 horsepower engines. Thirty and forty-foot cruisers, small, scampering Grady Whites and many other center console boats waited for the opening gun at 6:00 AM. Each ship carried three to six men and a nervous energy charged the air, as they worked themselves into a frenzy, shouting back and forth about the huge sharks they were going to bring in.

The VHF speakers crackled, "Gentlemen, start your engines," and like a blast from a shotgun, the wild fleet roared through the inlet, each captain slamming the throttle in a drag racing rush. John, a hospital worker, Jim, the Strong's sales manager and I grabbed for the handrails that outline the main areas on this Pursuit boat. Jim and I were behind the console's seats, being tossed nearly off our feet as the ship went airborne, leaping from one wave to the next, gaining on the Robalo fishing boat that took an early lead. The twin Yamaha outboards produced a deep, rumbling sound, that subtly changed pitch each time they threw the boat skyward. You felt these sounds, rather than heard them, for in actuality you could hear nothing but the dozens of engines roaring through the rocky groins of the inlet.

"Be sure to write that Strong's Marine went out first," shouted Capt. Dennis, as we shot into the Atlantic, just ahead of others. We turned towards the southwest, while the others fanned out, each darting off like small rockets, some leaving huge rooster tails of white foam in their wakes. The seas had a two-foot chop and we bounced across them at over 35 knots, flying into the air at the crest and crashing into the next, throwing a splash 20 feet on either side of the hull. The Pursuit 30 footer was solid, not a rattle or shake for the entire hour ride out into the wide-open waters.

Dennis charted a course on the Furuno navigation system, its computer screen showing a map of not only the land but also the ocean's bottom. He's taken Mako sharks before and knew where they like to catch their meals, over 30 miles out, in water nearly 200 feet deep. A mere dot on both the surface of the empty ocean and the nav computer screen, we flew out to the fingers, small canyons in the ocean bottom, just south of the shipping lanes. Once, Dennis had to alter his straight, beeline course, to avoid a thousand pound sunfish. It floating like a disk shaped UFO just under the surface. The depth finder's colorful display told us we were in waters over 180 feet deep, and the southern current had the green ocean temperature up to 74 degrees. "Maybe a bit too warm for Mako," said Dennis.

When he stopped the engines, the boat gently rocked in the small waves but the crew became choppy and rushed. John opened a hatch in the rear of the boat, revealing a huge insulated bait locker. He removed two huge tubs of chopped up fish parts and began working the chum pots that he tied over the side. Dennis rigged the gear, two large reels and rods designed to bring in fish weighing hundreds of pounds. Working as a choreographed team, they prepared the bait. The rear of the center console seats opened into two banks of drawers, overflowing with steel wire, lures, sinkers, hooks and balloons. John and Dennis removed mackerel and squid from a stern bait tank, attaching huge steel hooks through them and even sewing sinkers into their mouths, so they will float submerged, hopefully attracting the big one. By 7 AM, we had three lines in the water, with colorful balloons attached so when there's a hit, we'd see the movement.

And then we waited. And waited. And waited. The morning was incredible; brilliant sun, clear sky, gentle breeze and low 80-degree temperatures. Dennis cranked up the Clarion sound system, Dennis broke out coffee and rolls and John had the Breakfast of Champions, a Bud. And we waited.

Like a sonar system on a Navy destroyer, the fish finder scanned the water for prey. The blue fish were the green dots, hovering 50 feet below the calm surface. Every so often a red dot would appear. Mako. A shark.

Minutes passed, as four pairs of eyes scanned the surface. "There, look! There's a swirl by the yellow balloon!"

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

GAS WOES

I know you heard this one before, but I gotta tell it again, because it's so apropos to this article. Giant SUV pulls into a full service gas station and tells the attendant to "fill 'er up." Preoccupied, the driver forgets to shut off his motor. A few minutes into the fill-up, the gas attendant knocks on the drivers car window to get his attention, and shouts,

"You better shut off your motor, you're getting ahead of me!"

This joke is not that silly, because today gasoline is going up in price every day, and who's complaining the most; all the wackos driving those giant, heavyweight, monster powered V-8 and Z/V-10 powered SUVs and pick-up trucks. C'mon folks, you knew what you were buying when you bought those things, why the gas mileage was plastered (by law) in the side window. By now you know that if the sticker said 12 MPG city mileage and 16 MPG highway, in actuality you are probably getting 13 miles per gallon. Welcome to the automobile poorhouse.

To make up for these high gasoline prices, the government is giving everyone some money. They call it a tax return. I call it the oil refinery relief act. In reality, the money will go right into the coffers of the oil companies. They all say the high prices are not their doing and blame outside market forces. Humbug. In April, East Coast refiner Sunoco announced its best first quarter in the history of the company. Profits were up 68% over the previous year. The city of Houston is booming, with two new oil company skyscrapers being built, the first in decades.

There is a scandal of epic proportions here. Isn't it coincidental that both our elected leaders are ex-oilmen?

Enough of venting my anger. Let's talk about classic cars, both gas hogs and thrifty little buggers.

The basic design differences behind the world's cars have always been the cost of powering them. Unlike America, Europe to this day, has always had high gas prices. For this reason, most of the great classic cars built in Europe have had small engines, with some notable exceptions. The three most famous European small cars were the Italian Fiat 500, the French Citroen 2CV and the British Austin Mini. The Fiat and the Citroen each had a two cylinder engine, developing around thirty horsepower. The original Mini was designed with a two cylinder engine, but when it finally went into production it had a powerful four cylinder engine of 42 horsepower.

In retrospect, all three of these cars represent each country's engineering solution to producing a frugal economy car, thus each one of them is a brilliant design, especially considering they were built in the '50s and '60s. There was one other European small car of some renown. It had a very strange name, the Volkswagen Beetle. By today's standards their fuel economy wasn't that great. The two cylinder Fiat and Citroen only 45-50 MPG. Both cars had a top speed of only about sixty miles per hour. You were lucky to get 35-40 MPG in a Mini. The Volkswagen strived to achieve 28MPG.

The most amazing thing about all of these cars is that they are so different, so representative of the countries in which they were born. The Italian Fiat is a charming and beautiful little machine, a little caricature of a real car. The French Citroen, is ooh la la, so different and avant gard, so amazingly soft riding. A car to leave parked in front of the Moulin Rouge at night. The British Mini is a proper diminutive vehicle, small but stately. So much so that a genuine wood fascia kit (dashboard to you Yanks) was offered as an option. The 80 horsepower Mini modified by Mr. Cooper was so fast that it won the Monte Carlo Rally three times. Then we have the omnipresent Volkswagen Bug, arguably one of the ugliest cars ever built. But it was designed by an engineering genius, and for the period, was a stout unbreakable machine. A taste of entry level German engineering. Dr. Porsche knew what he was doing.

Because of electronic fuel injection, super overdrive transmissions, variable valve timing and so many more on-board computer driven devices, today's cars get incredible gas mileage. 160 MPH Porsches and Corvettes get 25MPG on the highway. SUVs are simply too heavy to get good mileage. Lesson learned: Either drive a Fiat, or stop complaining about your SUV gas hog.

DAN TRAVELS

shouted John. Whoa, I thought, as I saw a fin, flipper and torso of something big, blue and white, nearly hop out of the water and then submerge out of sight. No strike.

Minutes passed. The chum left an oil slick across the ocean's surface and soon blue fish were swarming round the boat. They darted through the chum line, grabbing small appetizers but not taking any real bites. "There's Mahi Mahi," shouted Jim, "they are beautiful fish and delicious." Within the school of three foot blues were these iridescent bodies, glowing bright blue and neon green. They were larger than the dull blue gray shapes that surrounded them, with huge wing-like fins jutting out from the extreme front of their torsos.

Like a bolt of lightning from a clear sky, we had a hit. Jim grabbed the reel, as line shot out. The Mako ran to the depths. The pole bent low, as Jim worked the fish in towards the boat. John grabbed a huge grappling hook, tying one end to the stern cleat so if this was the big one, it wouldn't pull him and the hook overboard. Dennis started the engines and maneuvered the ship so the shark couldn't run under the boat, fouling the lines and breaking free.

I grabbed my video camera and through the viewfinder I saw this four-foot fish leap to the surface, fighting wildly against the huge steel hook embedded in its jaw. It smacked against the side of the stern, Jim leading it towards the bow, so John could grab this 80-pound fish and toss it into the boat. It all began in an instant of wild but controlled chaos and ended just as rapidly, in a thrashing abrupt snap. The line broke. Mako gone.

The rest of the day was quiet, with freighters slowly passing to our north and one huge container ship first appearing and then disappearing in the low summer haze to the south. There was delicious fried chicken and beer supplied by Capt Dennis, sort of chum for the crew, considering the way we hovered around the cooler. Birds and butterflies floated about. What they were doing 35 miles from shore is a mystery of nature. They probably thought the same thing about us.

Towards late afternoon, the blues returned and Jim had the hot hand, hauling in fish after fish, even after the light fishing pole he was using snapped in half. He kept dropping the line in from the bottom half of this broken brown stalk and pulling out beauties, even two Mahi Mahi that Dennis got to eat that night.

All tournament boats had to be in by 6 p.m. so at 5 we ended our fruitless hunt and roared north, making 38 knots over the open sea. The navigation computer was set for a mode where we were a small boat on its display, hugging a straight line directly towards the inlet. On all horizons there was nothing but waves and ocean waters, except for some small dots of other boats, racing for home. But the 5 satellites guided the computer it had us safely tied up at Oakland's dock, just inside the Shinnecock Inlet, with 4 minutes to spare.

The experience of high tech fishing was incredible and a rare opportunity to see the blending of huge power plants, computer sensors and time honed fishing techniques. If ever interested in a unique experience, charter a fishing

Saturday, July 28, 2001
LVIS/LION'S CLUB Barbeque and Take-Out 4:00 PM to 7:30 PM

It's high summer and high time to enjoy the Ladies' Village Improvement Society Old-fashioned Village Fair. Come, bring the children to the carousel and playland. It's all canopies and banners and booths spread gaily over the grounds of our Gardiner Brown house - right on Main Street across from the Hunting Inn. Come for the plant sale, the booths filled with crafts, mystery gifts, vintage fabrics, jewelry, Bargain Books, Bargain Box clothes and more, more, more! Join in the raffle or the silent auction. Have a hot dog or a gourmet salad, stroll, enjoy the shade trees and the happy yearly gathering - of practically the whole town. It's all our traditional old-fashioned fun - and, remember, the proceeds of your fun help us in our efforts to improve today's East Hampton.

NEW ART SPACES: GALLERY MERZ AND EGP

The Hamptons' summer season invariably brings crowds, traffic and new art spaces. While such venues come in diverse sizes, shapes and intentions, both Sag Harbor's Merz Gallery and Water Mill's EGP represent prevailing trends: a conventional, intown gallery and an alternative, nonconventional space, respectively.

Men Gallery is not entirely conventional, however. Owners Elisca Jeansonne and David Slater are both respected artists and fine art framers, and they have combined their two professional pursuits into one venue. The gallery's name, which comes from a term coined by Kurt Schwitters, signifies the idea of collage; it's a connotation which is most appropriate considering that Mr. Slater himself is known for his collages, often stressing political/social themes.

The gallery's initial show features paintings by Jane Johnson and ceramics by Bernice Mast. The mixture of styles and materials also conveys the fragmentary spirit of collage: ornate, textured and ancient-looking ceramics combined with contemporary, sometimes abstract paintings.

Ms. Johnson's pieces owe their origin to nature, like the sea, birds, boats and trees. Simply put, they make the spectator feel good, the artist's use of color is particularly joyful.

Work by Ms. Johnson

Located in a shingled house on Montauk Highway, EGP primarily showcases European furniture; as such it is an alternative space that is also joyful. While it's not unusual to display paintings in an antique or furniture shop, most fine arts galleries stick strictly to the visual arts. (Vered Gallery provided an exception several years ago when it exhibited living environments designed by Eleanor Leonard complete with paintings.)

The paintings at EGP face the same challenge that other works encounter when hung in alternate spaces: visual competition from other objects (like books in a bookstore) or from tables filled with diners (in a restaurant).

The pieces at EGP, however, would do quite nicely if presented in a traditional gallery, particularly the photographs by Jefferson Hayman, Felex Berroa's surreal figurature works and Devigne's "Pieta." The eclectic nature of the works seems to fit right in with the varied furniture styles as well.

The current show at Sag Harbor's Merz Gallery (95 Main Street) is on view until July 27; EGP is at 720 Montauk Highway, Water Mill.

HONORING THE ARTIST: MICHAEL KNIGIN

Like most of us these days, artist and East Hampton resident Michael Knigin is a busy person. Up at 7:30 each morning, he quickly gets to work on his various projects but not before he's had his coffee. Last week, that project was conceiving and designing a cover for Dan's Papers, but he could be working on any number of endeavors, like his current vintage nude series.

Continuing with his daily routine, Mr. Knigin never stops for lunch, preferring instead to take a break by playing tennis at 3:30 in the afternoon. Then it's a shower and perhaps dinner with a friend. (This week Mr. Knigin was off to attend a concert at the Music Festival of the Hamptons.)

At first glance, Mr. Knigin's routine doesn't seem all that unusual, yet it is when we consider its variation, combining creative work with athletics and music. (He also teaches at Pratt Institute during the year where he's been a professor for over thirty years.)

Being a well rounded individual is important to Mr. Knigin, although it's not as conventional or as easy as it looks. Neither are the deeply felt ideas that he expresses in his art.

"I think about what I'm going to do first. My ideas come usually just before I go to sleep, my 'down time,' sort of like a 'stream - of - consciousness,'" Mr. Knigin explains. "Sometimes the ideas come from the outside, from stimulation outside myself.

"Hopefully, I have something to say that will make people aware of their moral responsibility, that will serve as a springboard for their own consciousness. With my Holocaust series, for example, I wanted people to think about how they treated other people every day."

Mr. Knigin does not sound presumptuous, but sincere instead. He has a similar attitude when expressing ideas about his intentions: "I just don't do things to sell. My life has been one of introspection and trying to discover values that are important to me. Everything is a quest for knowledge. The more your horizons are expanded, the more knowledge you have. I tell my students, Don't tell me you don't know what to paint, that you have no ideas. You know what to do, you just don't know it."

However, Mr. Knigin doesn't leave his students entirely on their own. "I ask them about their fears," he continues. "Fear is a driving force. You must face your fears if you're a good artist."

Mr. Knigin has practiced what he preaches, facing his fear, for example, when he went diving with frogman in Israel several years ago. While this experience may not be directly related to making him a better artist, it was important to him. As Mr. Knigin has said, "Everything is a quest for knowledge."

Maestro And The Mad King: The Making Of A Concert

While England was losing the colonies, George III was losing his mind. Big time.

This is the premise of the July 27 Eos Orchestra concert that I will conduct at the John Drew Theatre in East Hampton. At the Guild Hall, Eos will be presented in a concert of music that King George heard when sane and music as he heard it when he was not. An overture by one of Bach's sons and a Haydn symphony, both of which George attended during his reign, will surround a staged performance of Peter Maxwell Davies' 1969 monodrama, "Eight Songs For a Mad King." When we first did this program in NY last season, the New York Times called it "a shattering performance of a brilliant work." We have gathered together the artists involved in that concert for a special repeat performance. I find Dean Elzinga's performance as King George utterly amazing, and wonderfully directed by Gregory Keller.

How we make our programs is the very essence of our identity, since what you play is what you are. I've felt for years that concerts are so often unfulfilling for people who do not have a lifelong experience of hearing classical music. When I design a program, I try and imagine what the experience of listening will be like from the first piece chosen to the last detail of how the stage should look. Very often I begin with a work I am eager to play, or an artist I want to work with, or an unknown work by a famous composer I have found in an archive. From these flow all kinds of musical and non-musical connections, as I try to link the parts of a concert together into a satisfying whole. In the end, a brilliant performance of something thoroughly researched and planned cannot fail to captivate. At least that is the goal!

The Eos Orchestra heads out here for the first time in our six-year history, following our winter season in NY and recent concerts at the World Trade Center and Chicago's prestigious Ravinia Festival. We have been on a mission since we organized in 1995: to make concerts both entertaining and fascinating, and to re-imagine the whole idea of what a concert can be. We try and create programs for veteran music-lovers as well as people who never have attended classical music concerts in their lives. To do this we add visual and dramatic elements to music programs that attempt to have a discernable narrative, almost like a piece of theatre. We began in 1995 at Lincoln Center with a festival of music by the expatriate novelist Paul Bowles, who returned to NY from Tangier for the first time in 40 years to hear his music performed. And we've been creating new and unusual programs ever since, while making CDs of unique American music and producing a series of books on subject related to our concerts. Many of our concerts are broadcast on NPR, and last year our concert/documentary on Aaron Copland, produced by WNET's "Great Performances" was seen throughout the U.S. on PBS, and internationally on the BBC, to much acclaim.

July 27 will be an exciting night for us, because we view this engagement hopefully, as a preview of future seasons when we might appear here more often. The new director of Guild Hall, Dr. Ruth Appelhof, came to NY to see one of our concerts, and subsequently invited us to bring a program to East Hampton. As many people know, the Guild Hall is soon to embark on a major renovation of its theatre, which would allow it to expand its role as a venue that is home to new and ambitious kinds of theatre and music.

Another week chockablock with wonderful theater, music, speakers and special events. Here are some highlights: three new theater productions (one in Sag Harbor, two in Montauk); Music Festival of the Hamptons; separate performances by Robert Klein, Sandra Bernhard, Karen Akers; Opera of the Hamptons; Merce Cunningham Dance Company; Peconic Blues Festival; Ballet Folklórico de Mexico; and the East End Poetry Slam contest in Greenport. The Bridgehampton Polo Club's international high-goal polo match is Saturday at 4 p.m., and the NY Hamptons tennis matches this weekend feature Jan-Michael Gambill, Patrick and John McEnroe.

This is a week of low-key, entertaining benefits—a bachelor auction on Friday in East Hampton for Cancer Care of Long Island; on Saturday, East Hampton's LongHouse Reserve, the Jack Lenor Larsen-created foundation featuring world crafts and unique gardens, honors playwright Edward Albee; on Monday, Southampton College's "All for the Sea" benefit concert stars Paul Simon and Brian Wilson; next Thursday, classic rock & roll groups perform at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center for Suffolk County Special Olympics. For details on these and other entertaining events, read on:

THEATER and COMEDY

Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre presents its third summer production, Rupert Holmes' mystery Accomplice. The show plays Tuesday through Sunday evenings with two performances on Saturday and Sunday. There is a post-performance "talk back" with the cast next Tuesday evening, and a special perk for gay and lesbian theatergoers next Wednesday evening. For tickets ($32-$50), call the box office at (631) 725-9500 or order online at boxoffice@baystreet.org.

Montauk Theatre Productions presents Jeffrey Hatcher's Three Viewings, a dark comedy first produced by the Manhattan Theatre Club. It stars Manhattan actors Sidney Myer and Mimi Scott, and is directed by Ilona Vellios. Performances are Thursday through Saturday evening at the MTP Studio, 6 South Elmwood Ave. (next to Oyster Pond restaurant). MTP presents the cabaret "Show of the Century" on Sunday at Gurney's Inn. For tickets to the play ($20; discounts for seniors and students) or cabaret, call (631) 668-5656.

Two outstanding actor/comics are here this weekend. On Friday, acclaimed comedian and raconteur Robert Klein comes to East Hampton's John Drew Theater to open this summer's Mercedes-Benz Concerts-by-the-Sea series. "An Evening with Robert Klein: Comedic Child of the 50s" begins at 8 p.m.; for tickets ($45), call the box office at (631) 324-4050. On Saturday, the outspoken and somewhat uncensored Sandra Bernhard brings her most recent one-woman show, I'm Still Here...Damn It!, to the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center on Saturday, 8:30 p.m. (call 631 288-1500 for $30-$60 tickets).

The Playwrights' Theatre of East Hampton presents its third new-play reading this Friday and Saturday evening, 9 p.m., at the LTV Studios, Industrial Rd., Wainscott (off Montauk Highway at Daniel's Hole Rd.). Daniel Pinkerton's dramatic Do You Want To Know A Secret?, one East German woman's discovery of her secret police file after the Berlin Wall falls, will be directed by Trisha Sandberg. There is a brief discussion after the staged presentation, followed by dessert. For tickets ($15), call Pazer Productions at (631) 329-9909.

The Hamptons Shakespeare Festival opens at Theodore Roosevelt County Park in Montauk next Wednesday, July 25. Twelfth Night, one of the Bard's best-loved comedies, is performed by an international cast Wednesday through Sunday evening at 7:30 p.m. Come early and bring a picnic dinner (refreshments are also sold). HSF productions include music and are suitable for the whole family. There is no admission charge, but a $12 per person donation is suggested. Performances continue in Montauk through August 16, then move to Agawam Park, Southampton, August 21 and 23-26. For additional information, go to their website www.hamptons-shakespeare.org or call (631) 267-0105.

MUSIC and DANCE

This is the closing week of concerts for this summer's delightful Music Festival of the Hamptons. Thursday evening, a chamber trio play "Russian Sizzle"—works by Stavinsky, Gershwin, Schoenfield and others. Friday, West Coast concert pianist Gloria Cheng plays Debussy, Messiaen and a premier of an Esa Peka-Salomon work. Saturday evening, the closing concert at the Festival Tent in Bridgehampton features the Canadian Brass (a $75 donation includes the concert and a post-performance reception). Sunday, Henrie Moodie and the Harlem Opera present a 5 p.m. benefit concert to

HAMPTONS NIGHTLIFE WITH CHRISTINE CARROLL

Stephen's Talkhouse was packed last weekend, you all must have been there. If not you missed a great show on Saturday. The Memory Motel was also packed, I guess everyone is really into live bands lately. DJ's are still cool but live bands have wonderful talent that is great to check out. I want to say good luck to Jill Robins, we will miss you.

Kiss of The Dragon

rhythm guitarist, Eddie Condon, put it this way, "They don't tell us how to play Jazz and we won't tell them how to jump on grapes." Now with the new martial arts action movie, Kiss of the Dragon, the two culture-besotted countries, China and France, are fused in Paris, with an intense, electric flash-firing as crackling hot as a wriggling, long, jagged streak of lightening. Do the two amalgamate well? Not really, because the hero/star and fabulous martial artist, Jet Li, is a Chinese government agent whose life is made a living hell by corrupt Parisians. (Funny... that's the way the people I have those tussles with feel). However, that thunderbolt clash gives Mr. Li's balletic, truly, masterful performance a studied pattern of contrasting backgrounds of picture postcard beauty splashed with violence and grimy back alleys of pimps, prostitutes, punks and contaminated cops as scenery for oddly tender sentimentality which almost matches Jet Li's own childlike (albeit pockmarked), quite innocent face... also adding a fine contrast to the violence he wreaks. His abilities and his choreographer, Corey Yuen's, designs set a new standard for Ballet Battles... and, they do it without wires, speeded-up Keystone Kops-like camera tricks or stealthy editing.

DID WE HEAR, "OUI, OUI," IN THE ALLEY?

For the French, the film was produced and co-written (from a story by Mr. Li) by Luc Besson, whose brilliantly brutal and original, La Femme Nikita, (which he directed) also bears his unmistakable, brackish stinging imprint. Kiss, is directed by a young commercial and video director, Chris Nahon, also French and, also a whiz-bang talent. Percolating wildly is unmatched villany, lead by the most villainous and cheeky, Tcheky Karyo (his big chin is bad, too). They're all BAD! Li's old Uncle Tai tells him, "Oh the French are not so bad, once you get used to them." Sure... tell them. Ka-boom-A-Bomb! Quality photography and music almost make you forget the story sucks and Bridget Fonda adds only sexy good looks, with a face and thighs that distract you from her having to urinate outside Li's doorway and the fact that she starred in the American La Femme Nikita (Point of No Return). Need I say that the Hollywood version...?

EN MEL BLANC ET NOIR

Were the French influenced by Hollywood? Certainement! But, let's remember the term, Film Noir... films like, Breathless, were not made in Cleveland. And, will we ever get along with China? And, what's happening in Sweden? Come back, Ingmar! Come back, Shane!

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award winning European films and Network TV. He has judged the major Film and TV award competitions! He is assisted in this column by Sarah Halsey.

KISS OF THE DRAGON

KISS A DRAGON... WHERE?

I have always been a fan of Chinese Films... deeply appreciating their passionately adhering to tradition. Americans, however, as a ticket buying bloc, have not shared my devotion... that is until Ang Lee insinuated himself back into the genre, with his "Grouchy" Tiger with the "Hiding" Dragon... With that movie, he incinerated the classic Red Lantern of Chinese cinema poetry (it is, after all, as sensitive as slivers of bamboo and rice paper). He poured on all the fuel that fires-up Hollywoodiana that he could grab. He threw in the ingenuity from Matrix, Western oats with FX and, ZORRO swordplay with Peter Pan flightiness and thereby, grabbed the public by the seat of their Hot Pants. Okay... so sue me. I also thought the Hollywood Traffic, was not nearly as good as the British, Traffik, from which it stemmed. So, folks, why did I like, Kiss Of The Dragon? I'm glad you asked.

HONG KONG TO PARIS

DON'T HOP A PLANE TOOT SWEET

I don't want to get into a kick boxing match with anyone but, I have the same set-to with some of you good people about France as well as classic Chinese Film. They both cling tenaciously to stubborn pride concerning concepts of National Culture. I like that. Okay, again. Take me to court. It is said, To Each His or Her Own. Not too long ago some French critics were making pronouncements about our Jazz music. The introduce opera and classical music to new audiences (no charge for children; adult tickets $25 and $50). For tickets ($25 and $50), call the Festival at 800-644-4418 or www.musicfestivalofthehamptons.com

The annual Riverhead Blues Festival is this Friday through Sunday at the Peconic Riverfront park. There will be more than 50 acts performing on four stages over the three days—AND THERE IS NO ADMISSION CHARGE. The music goes from 4:30 to 11 p.m. on Friday, there's a Mardi Gras parade down Main St. at noon Saturday followed by music until 11 p.m., and the music Sunday is from 1 to 6 p.m. For a schedule of performers, check their website at www.riverheadblues.com or call (631) 369-0063.

Those "Marx Brothers of brass," the Canadian Brass, who play everything from highbrow classical pieces to Fats Waller rags, stop in at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center on Friday, 8:30 p.m. For tickets, call WHBPAC at (631) 288-1500.

The John Drew Theater at Guild Hall, East Hampton, has three different musical performances this week. On Saturday at 8 p.m., sophisticated cabaret songstress Karen Akers comes in to solo. On Sunday, excerpts from shows choreographed by Patricia Birch (Grease, Candide, A Little Night Music, They're Playing Our Song, You're A Good Man Charlie Brown and many more) will be performed by Broadway stars for Lee Davis's "American Musical Theater Salutes" series, 8 p.m. Next Wednesday, at both 5 p.m. and 8 p.m., the Ballet Folklorico de Mexico brings its gorgeous costumes, native dances, music and story-telling onstage (very suitable for children). For all Guild Hall tickets, call (631) 324-4050.

There are three special performances this Saturday. The modern Merce Cunningham Dance Company will perform "Event," an original work commissioned by Southampton's Parrish Art Museum. It goes on in Agawam Park at the foot of Job's Lane, 5 p.m. (rainsite, Southampton High School; no admission charge). At 6 p.m., Opera of the Hamptons will perform Verdi's Rigoletto at Pindar Vineyards in Peconic on the North Fork. Tickets are $35 in advance (631 728-8804) or $50 at the door and light refreshments are served. At 8 p.m. in East Hampton, Hazzan Alberto Mizrahi, who has been called "the Jewish Pavarotti," will give a concert of Sephardic and cantorial music at the Jewish Center of the Hamptons (tickets $25 at the door).

Pianofest, the program for emerging concert pianists, offers its Monday recital in the Avram Fine Arts Theater, Southampton College, at 2 p.m. this coming Monday. Tickets are $10 at the door (no charge for students). The Perlman Music Program on Shelter Island invites everyone to open rehearsals on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday evenings; please call them at (631) 749-0740 to check this week's schedule.

FILM

The Parrish Art Museum's series "Monday Night at the Movies" takes a night off this week, but Guild Hall's French film series, courtesy of the Film Society of Lincoln Center, features Claude Chabrol's Les Bonnes Femmes on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. (tickets $10-$12 at the door).

SPEAKERS

Rabbi Marc Schneier and Martin Luther King III will talk about Schneier's new book Shared Dreams this Thursday, July 19, 7:30 p.m. at the Hampton Synagogue, Westhampton Beach (no admission charge, and a reception follows the discussion). The Bridgehampton library's "Fridays at Five" speaker this week is noted attorney and novelist Louis Begley (creator of Schmidt);

With this concert, histories both personal and political will overlap. East Hampton was settled by the British in the mid-17th century. By the time of Georgian England, the area had become more densely settled (no doubt to the dismay of the earlier residents!). We hope to evoke some sense of past history with his program. For myself, a ten-year resident of East Hampton, I will be reminded of my own past in these parts: my uncle Eugene was a summer resident of Amagansett from the early 1950's, and shared a close friendship with Inez Whipple, the longtime director of the John Drew Theatre. My family visited him here from time to time from the 60's until his death in 1982. I'll be thinking of them all, and I hope you will join us for this rare and entertaining evening.

Ask Dr. Dina

"I'm one of those people who thought it could never happen in MY family—but I was wrong. My teenaged daughter has run away. We haven't seen her since she left for school yesterday, some of her things are missing, and her friends don't know anything—or at least that's what they're telling us. I feel frightened, and guilty, and I'm in a panic."

Most kids who run away return within 48 hours. Those who don't face many dangers; you're right to be concerned. Act quickly.

First, keep notes on everything you do—date and time, places, whom you speak to, what they say. Check with your neighbors and your relatives; and your daughter's friends, teachers, job or coworkers. Reach as many of her friends as you can, and keep calling them or seeing them. Make sure they know that you're worried, not angry, and that the farthest thing from your mind is punishment. Check local hangouts, even if you don't think she ever went to them before.

As frightening as it may be, check with local hospital emergency rooms. Call the police. Ask if an officer will come to your house to take a report and pick up recent photos, dental records and fingerprints if available. Get the officer's name, badge number and phone number; the police report number; and the name of the officer who will follow up.

Ask police to list your daughter with the National Crime Information Center (NCIC) computer as soon as they possibly can (some localities have waiting periods before they will act on missing persons reports—but don't let your wait go for a moment longer than you have to). Call the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children at 800-843-5678—they can help deal with police. Call the Covenant House "Nineline" (800-999-9999) to leave a message and check for messages.

Make flyers with your daughter's picture; list her age, height, weight, hair and eye color, complexion, any scars, birthmarks, braces or pierced ears, the circumstances of her disappearance, your phone number, and police contacts. Distribute these to truck stops, youth-oriented businesses, hospitals, law-enforcement agencies.

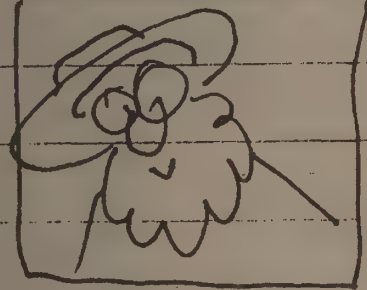

Contact local runaway shelters like Family and Children's/Podell Haven on the East End. Consider asking to talk to a counselor at Family and Children's or another reputable agency—there are many places in the community that offer guidance and help. You'll want to be ready for that first conversation with your daughter, and ready to continue your lives together on a better footing. If you learn one lesson from all this, let it be that ignoring problems won't make them go away.

When you do talk to her, in person or by phone, show concern, not anger. Say, "I love you." Say it often. Good luck.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

We were a group of 20 students on our way to cooking classes in Florence, Italy some twenty odd years ago when I was introduced to a young woman by the name of Rozanne Gold, who, at the time, was the personal chef of Mayor Edward Koch. How impressed I was with the very young Rozanne and her estimable position. And how delighted I am today to be able to write about her culinary successes.

Rozanne Gold, called the "diva of culinary minimalism," is a celebrated chef, consultant and three-time James Beard award winner. She hit the publishing market by storm in 1996 with her groundbreaking cookbook, Recipes, 1,2,3, (Viking). Every recipe in her four 1,2,3, tomes contain just three ingredients (salt, pepper and water are free, based on their frequent usage). Her philosophy is based on minimizing ingredients and maximizing flavor.

In Rozanne's latest "newborn" Healthy 1,2,3: The Ultimate Three-Ingredient Cookbook, (Stewart, Tabori & Chang) her focus is indeed on health. Rozanne collaborated with nutritionists to offer sound nutritional advice for recipes that are inventive, tempting and visually appealing. She offers a simple plan to eat scrumptious, healthy dishes that are low in fat and calories and rich in anti-oxidants and nutrients with nary a processed ingredient in sight.

Her zucchini foam (soup) with crab, lacquered salmon with pineapple soy reduction and melon au Porto (recipes below) seduced me. Other "can't wait to make recipes" are smoked salmon with wasabi cream, roasted pepper terrine, penne with zucchini, zucchini-garlic sauce, bay-steamed halibut with lemon oil, little tomato-pesto "Napoleons" and watermelon "carpaccio" with white chocolate. The appealing recipes and stunning photographs in Healthy 1,2,3 are sure to seduce you too.

ZUCCHINI FOAM WITH CRAB

Foaming has become an au courant technique among big name chefs recently. Rozanne manages to froth this soup in the simplest way.

Serves 4

- 3 medium-large zucchini about 1 1/2 pounds
- 1 small bunch fresh dill
- 8 ounces jumbo lump crabmeat

1. Wash zucchini thoroughly. Trim ends and cut zucchini into 1/2-inch chunks. Place in a 4-quart saucepan.

2. Wash dill and chop finely to yield 3 tablespoons. Add to pot with zucchini along with half the crabmeat and any accumulated juices from the crab. Cover with 1 1/2 cups cold water and 1 teaspoon kosher salt.

3. Bring to a boil. Lower heat and cover pot. Simmer for 20 minutes, until zucchini is very soft. Let cool for 5 minutes.

4. Transfer contents to a blender. Process until very smooth. This will take several minutes. Soup will thicken to a foamy texture.

5. Serve immediately or reheat gently, adding salt, if necessary, and freshly ground white pepper. Serve with a small mound of remaining crabmeat in center of each serving of soup. Garnish with fresh dill sprigs. This is also delicious cold.

LACQUERED SALMON WITH PINEAPPLE-SOY REDUCTION

Rozanne suggests that salmon steaks be used for this deliciously glazed recipe. I prepared it with both the salmon steaks and salmon fillets and was equally delighted with the results. Be sure to allow the required 2 hours before cooking to marinate the salmon.

Serves 4

Note: For this recipe I purchased a naturally brewed tamari premium soy sauce from Citarella in Water Mill to substitute for the Japanese shoyu. It has the same ingredients as Japanese Shoyu and produced excellent results.

- 2 cups unsweetened pineapple juice
- 4 teaspoons Japanese shoyu or tamari (see note*)
- 4 6-1/2-ounce thick salmon steaks

1. Put pineapple juice in a small nonreactive saucepan. Bring to a boil. Lower heat to medium and cook until juice is reduced to 1 cup, about 10-12 minutes. Transfer to a small bowl and let cool. Mix shoyu with reduced pineapple juice.

2. Place salmon in a shallow casserole. Pour pineapple-soy mixture over fish. Refrigerate and marinate for 2 hours, turning after the first hour.

3. Heat a large nonstick skillet or 2 small non-stick skillet until hot. Sear fish for 3 minutes on each side or until cooked through. Be careful not to overcook.

4. Meanwhile, place remaining pineapple shoyu mixture in a small saucepan and cook over medium-low heat until reduced by half, about 5 minutes. Using a pastry brush, glaze top of salmon with a little of the reduced marinade and remove salmon from the pan. Serve each portion with some of the remaining marinade. Serve immediately.

*Note: Traditional Japanese Soy sauce, or shoyu, is made from fermented soy beans, wheat, and salt, and has a highly complex flavor. Commercial brands — made, usually, with hydrolyzed vegetable protein, salt, flavoring, and caramel flavor — are not good substitutes. Tamari, usually made without wheat, is a bit heavier, but quite acceptable.

MELON AU PORTO

Serves 6

- 1 large, round-ripe honeydew, about 3 pounds
- 1 3/4 cups ruby port
- 2 envelopes unflavored gelatin

1. Cut melon in half lengthwise through the stem end, and scoop out the seeds. Cut small straight slices from bottom of melon halves so that they sit perfectly level.

2. In a large saucepan, put in port and 1 3/4 cups water. Sprinkle with gelatin. Let sit for 1 minute. Bring just to a boil, stirring constantly, until gelatin dissolves. Lower heat to maintain a simmer and cook for 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Let cool for 10 minutes.

3. Pour port mixture into melon halves, coming up to top of the melon, reserving leftover port mixture. Carefully put filled melon halves in refrigerator. Chill for at least 4 hours, until very firm.

4. Pour remaining mixture into 6 small ramekins, custard cups, or decorative molds. Carefully put in refrigerator. Chill for at least 4 hours, until very firm.

5. Cut melon into 6 wedges. Place on plates. Unmold ramekins by dipping bottoms into boiling water for a few seconds. Place one next to each melon wedge and serve.

Recipes reprinted from Rozanne Gold's Healthy 1,2,3, Stewart, Tabori, Chang.

Dining IN THE HAMPTONS

Savanna's occupies what used to be the Southampton Post Office, an elegant building that was moved, some years ago, from Main Street to its current location, just up by the railroad station. As soon as you enter the restaurant, you are immediately struck by the charming décor, where elegant furniture, white paneling, ceiling fans and potted plants give an almost colonial look, which is accentuated by the imposing bar which runs along one side of the room.

Now, straight away it must be said that, by all accounts, this Savanna has somewhat of a dual persona, according to Roberto, the charming and extremely enthusiastic manager. He told us that during the day and early evenings, Savanna's is quiet and relaxed but come the late evenings at weekends in the season and this is a lady who really lets her hair down and then it is party time! We met the sedate Savanna and found the restaurant captivating and loved such details as the smiling sunflower gracing every table.

Roberto is now in his fifth season with the restaurant and before that had a very varied and interesting career, having worked in his native Italy, spent three years in Germany, worked at Annabel's in London, where the late Princess Diana was a regular at one time and then came to Southampton via San Diego. He is simply effervescent with enthusiasm for the restaurant, his staff and the food and wine they serve. Javier, the executive chef has been cooking at Savanna's for three years and Thomas, the maitre d', is also a long time member of the staff, so there is that continuity which obviously helps to keep the restaurant running smoothly and to meet the demanding standards, Roberto and Maurice Ciminella the Executive Manager look for.

Roberto also gave us an insight into his philosophy of running a restaurant: 'First thing, every day I live, I learn how we can get better. I like it when diners are prepared to be a little adventurous in their eating. The most important thing though is that they should enjoy their visit."

Savanna's

268 Elm St., Southampton

Javier sent us a succession of tasting portions and we started with beautifully thinly sliced sushi-quality tuna carpaccio served with endive, seaweed salad and a slightly sweet chili sauce. The presentation was beautiful and the tuna, exquisite. This was followed with fresh black mussels cooked with white wine, crushed red pepper and crispy bacon, served on spinach. These were quite small mussels but with a very good texture and flavor. This dish might be a little salty for some tastes but we both really enjoyed this somewhat different presentation.

With our meal we drank a Cadonini Pinot Grigio and a Buckley Australian chardonnay, wines available by the glass and of very respectable quality. Roberto obviously puts a lot of his enthusiasm into his very comprehensive and realistically priced wine list and wines are available to suit all palates and purses. Long Island wines are featured and Roberto explained that he hopes to extend the selection in future.

Javier was very considerate in ensuring that we had time between courses to savor what we had just eaten, to talk and, of course, to watch how the dining room operated. It was obvious that the staff is very well mentored and this is a restaurant where ladies dining alone or with other lady friends are not relegated to tables by the serving doors but are treated with due courtesy.

Our next dish was the jumbo lump crab cake, which is served as an entrée with sautéed spinach and mashed carrots, which had a delicious fragrance of cinnamon and some of the most delectable shoestring potatoes you will ever find. These are totally decadent and addictive and although we vowed to leave some in the interests of further gastronomic research, we failed miserably, so be warned!

Javier then presented us with a selection of his pasta dishes. Spinach and ricotta ravioli paired with fresh roma tomatoes and basil melted in the mouth with a wonderful taste. Tagliolini, served with shrimp, asparagus and sundried tomatoes enhanced by crushed red pepper and shaved parmigian cheese, also demonstrated the chef's skill in preparing very light fresh food, full of intense perfectly blended flavors. Finally, we tried the Maine lobster tail with cherry tomatoes, fresh tarragon and spinach and again this proved to be a wonderful choice.

Now, Javier was keen to go exhibiting his culinary skill but very reluctantly, we had to defer further examination of the entrees, which included such tempting items as crisp wood oven roasted Long Island duck, sea bass served with orzo, and yellow snapper encrusted in horseradish and served with eggplant milanese. For the steak lovers, Savanna's prides itself on the aged prime steaks, which are available in a variety of cuts.

Space had to be left to research the dessert offerings and again Javier outdid himself with a wonderful warm apple tart, very moist, soft textured and suitably tart in taste. The tiramisu was delicate and full of flavor and the chocolate cheesecake was rated the 'best ever'.

Appetizers run from $9.95 to $13.95; Salads from $8.95 to $17.50; Pastas from $19.95 to $25.95; Entrees from $22.95 to $31.95 and desserts from $6.95 to $12.95.

Recommendation

As we finished our meal with a very good espresso, we both agreed that we totally understood why Savanna's has such a loyal core of regular customers. This is a place to meet, to talk and to enjoy (and to party at weekends). They cater to early diners with a special, which offers a full three-course meal with a glass of wine and coffee for the price of the entrée. Brunch is served from Thursday through Sunday and there are specials at weekends so, truly, there is something for everybody. The restaurant exemplifies very professional food and service in a comfortable civilized, elegant atmosphere and offers a very good blend of American and Mediterranean food, excellently cooked and served.

wine and hors d'oeuvres from Babette's and music from the Max Van Der Beek Quartet.

OCEAN'S GRILLFISH AND STEAK PRIX FIXE

Ocean's Grillfish & Steak on the Napeague Stretch in Amagansett (267-6980) is now offering a $19.95 three-course prix fixe. The special menu, which includes a choice of several appetizers, entrees and desserts, is available every day from 4 - 6 :30 p.m. Located at the site of the former Pig N' Whistle on the Napeague stretch, Ocean's Grillfish & Steak features local seafood, specializing in grilled fish, whole lobsters and prime aged beef in a casual setting at affordable prices.

PRIX FIXE AT SHEPHERD'S BACKYARD

The Shepherd's Backyard restaurant at the Shepherds Neck Inn in Montauk (668-2105) now offers a $17.95 Prix Fixe Dinner, available nightly, all evening long. The menu is as follows: Deluxe Salad Bar, followed by a choice of entrees: Sliced London Broil with mushroom demi-glace, Marinated Grilled Chicken marinated in teriyaki, sesame oil and tropical juices, or Grilled Norwegian Salmon with herb butter. Dessert choices include Rice Pudding, Chocolate Mousse, Vanilla or Coconut Caramel Custard or Baked Apple Pie.

GOURMET MARKET PROFILE: CITARELLA

Foodies rejoiced when the premier gourmet Manhattan market Citarella (726-3636) opened a branch in the Hamptons last year. Located on the Montauk Highway in Watermill, Citarella offers everything the epicurian heart desires: from super-fresh seafood, prime meats, caviar, truffles, foie gras, fresh ravioli and pastas to gourmet meals, charcuterie, smoked fish and more. And just this past spring, Citarella to Go opened up right next door. They offer a full takeout menu that runs from soup, salads, pastas, fajitas, panini, wrap sandwiches, and Citarella's signature rotisserie chicken.

CHEF PROFILE: ISAAC LUCERO OF 95 SCHOOL STREET

Isaac is a native of Mexico who acquired most of his culinary skills by working under notable Manhattan and East End chefs. His career began at Manhattan restaurants Sofi, Florence Metropolis Café and Remi. In 1996 Isaac headed to the East End and landed in the noted kitchen of The Laundry. At The Laundry, he worked beside Dennis MacNeil, who he then followed to the opening of his new restaurant Peconic Coast. In 2001, Isaac was named to the executive chef position at 95 School Street in Bridgehampton where his menu features simple and tasty dishes highlighting East End products.

The Rose St Art House in Sag Harbor

The Rose St. Art House is offering artists the opportunity to join the best located cooperative gallery on Long Island, five foot display spaces starting at only $150.00 per month with no gallery commission.

In addition, up to twenty works of each member artist will be digitally archived at the gallery for no additional cost allowing potential clients to view entire collections which may not be physically on display. At the artists discretion, a CD of their works will be compiled and offered to serious clients as a further incentive toward sales. A representation of each artists work will also be included in ads placed in local paper, magazines and art guides, in "Portfolio" the gallery publication and on the gallery website which will be linked to the most active search engines and art related sites. Openings of member artists works and art related events will be held weekly in the gallery court yard giving the public the chance to meet the artist and become more acquainted with their work.

Dining IN THE HAMPTONS

When a restaurant in the Hamptons has been around for ten years and is still run by the same owner/chef and his wife, and when it continues to attract diners who regularly come back summer and winter, then, firstly, they must be doing something right and secondly, a review is almost superfluous.

But I'm so glad that Max and Nancy Weintraub did offer the opportunity to visit them recently. Max was the Executive Chef at the Maidstone Club and also was the Chef at the Maidstone Arms before he and Nancy opened their restaurant.

As soon as you meet them you know that these are both very professional people who put a lot of themselves into the restaurant, which was remodeled internally by Nancy and is now a charming, warm dining room.

Talking with them before the meal, they explained that their concept is not to have a high profile but to be a place where people enjoy their food, all of which is prepared on the premises from the highest quality and freshest ingredients. Another very important area for them is staffing. Nancy runs the front of the house and she told us how carefully they select staff and that, if necessary, they would choose to run shorthanded rather than break the harmony which exists with their existing staff many of whom have been with them for years. Mary and Sammy who looked after us very attentively have been at Café Max for six and ten years respectively and Joseph, the sous chef has been with Max for six years.

We started our meal with a selection of appetizers. The crab cake was excellent with extremely good texture and taste and we were told with pride that this was really made from Maryland crabmeat. Roasted redpeppers were teamed with a wonderful goat cheese and plump anchovy fillets. This produced a blend of flavors that was so good although I have to admit that we are both fond of anchovies.

Cafe Maxx
85 Montauk Highway East Hampton,
324 - 2004

Nancy told us that Max, as part of his continuing drive for interesting new dishes and techniques had recently learned how to prepare sushi and the plate of assorted sushi we tried was first class both in visual presentation and taste and the dipping sauce was livened by a touch of wasabi.

As we enjoyed these, Nancy came to chat and extolled the virtues of Max's calamari and then another of our charming servers, Margaret, told us how good the soft shell crabs were, so what could we do but give in and try these as well!

The calamari proved just as good as Nancy predicted, being very fresh and the coating made the outside crisp while keeping the calamari very tender. As for the soft-shelled crabs, I must own up that I have never been drawn to these but I am so glad that we did try them, 'à la Max' because they were superb. Max serves them sautéed with beurre blanc, garlic and lemon or you can have them with olive oil, garlic and herbs as you prefer. This was, by any standards, a wonderful succulent dish which has totally changed my views of soft shell crabs for ever – at least as far as those at Café Max are concerned.

Max offers a wide range of salads, including some daily specials and we choose to taste his special pear salad served over mixed greens and with chopped walnuts and gorgonzola cheese and dressed with the house dressing of tarragon and Dijon. The result was a well-balanced blend of flavors without the strong taste of the cheese dominating at all. The other salad of endive and arugula with shaved parmesan was, by contrast, more astringent and assertive but again all of the ingredients were well balanced.

Café Max offers a wide selection of entrées and we chose to try the Cajun blackened and spicy bass which was perfectly cooked and retained the texture and delicate taste of the fish, while the spicy blackening enhanced the flavor without taking over. Veal Champignon was the other choice and this showcased the quality of the meat that Max chose to use. The veal was of superb quality and perfectly cut and was served with mushrooms and also with the best polenta I have ever eaten. It was extremely light and full of subtle flavors and bore no resemblance to the stodgy material so often passed off as polenta. The vegetable selections were all of high quality and the presentation was extremely attractive.

Nancy is responsible for choosing the wines stocked by the restaurant and she is justifiably proud that they have been recognized by the Wine Spectator for the quality and scope of their wine list, with awards each year since 1995. The fact that they offer not just wines by the bottle and glass but also small or large carafes and half bottles is another indication that the Café Max is a place where they really do set out to make sure that diners get what they want to make their visit enjoyable.

All of the proffered desserts sounded great and we finished our evening with a sampling which included one of the finest chocolate mousses we have ever enjoyed, a very light and tasty key lime pie and a mixed berry tart.

Appetizers run from $5 to $10; Salads $5.50 to $8.50; Pasta $18 (also available in half portions); Entrees $19.50 to $25. They offer a very attractive 2-course prix fixe for $18 on Sundays, Monday, Wednesday and Thursday and a 3-course dinner for $21 on Monday and Wednesdays.

Recommendation

Café Max is a great place to meet and eat and Max is a top class chef – what more is there to ask for, especially as Nancy and her team keep the busy dining room running smoothly. If you decide to eat here, they do take reservations for parties of three or more and if you come without a reservation and they are busy and Nancy quotes you a wait time – believe her because almost certainly you will end up being seated even sooner.

As I said at the beginning of this review, Café Max already has a sterling reputation and a devoted regular clientele. If you have not eaten here, do so, you will find very good food at sensible prices and backed up by professional friendly service. Like the legendary and lamented "Cheers", Café Max is also a place where, very quickly, "Everybody knows your name" and you are welcomed as a friend.

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

The following article is from Senator Shumer's office. Please contact Hiram Larew with your views on this proposed legislation: 313 Hart Office Building, Washington, DC 20510. (tel: 202-224-6542, fax: 202-228-3027).

The issue of farm labor is extremely important to New York and Long Island's farm community. The following is a proposal for a guest-worker program outlined by Senator Phil Gramm (R) Texas who has not supported reform of the H2A program. His proposal is just one idea proposed in the US Senate.

According to Senator Gramm, this "preliminary proposal... will be the subject of debate and refinement in the coming weeks during meetings with Senators, Congressmen, officials of the Bush and Fox administrations, and many other interested parties." Features of the plan include the following:

A guest-worker program would permit adult participants to accept work in the US on an annual or seasonal basis. Year-by-year extensions would be permitted. The U.S., in cooperation with Mexico, will operate a computer registry to monitor entry and exit of guest-workers.

Seasonal workers who return to Mexico in the off-season could receive annual guest-worker permits indefinitely. Those guest-workers who work for the entire year could reapply and receive up to three consecutive permits, after which they would have to return to Mexico for a year before reapplying.

Undocumented workers already in the U.S., and their employers, would have six months to apply for a guest-worker permit which would be automatically granted. During an initial registration period, illegal aliens will receive a one-time-only exemption from deportation and employers will be able to register their undocumented workers without penalty or sanction.

In Mexico, workers would enroll through a system devised by the government of Mexico, which will establish and supervise its own eligibility standards.

All guest-workers, regardless of where they sign up, will receive identification cards that serve as their documentation for accepting employment in the U.S.

While it is anticipated that workers will be employed primarily in the service industries and agriculture, the program will not limit the type of job which can be offered by any employer or accepted by any worker.

The U.S. Department of Labor will be responsible for applying U.S. wage and hour laws within the guest-worker program, including payment of at least the minimum wage, and normal requirements for safe working conditions, as well as clean and livable housing for migrant and seasonal workers. Employers who violate these requirements will be subject to the full range and impact of penalties that would apply if their employees were American citizens, plus debarment from the guest-worker program for up to 10 years.

Employers would be required to show that they had made a good-faith effort to hire Americans. Guest-workers would receive the same pay and benefits given any other worker in the same job. After the initial six month grace period, penalties for the employment of illegal aliens would be substantially increased and strictly enforced. Hiring an illegal alien after the guest-worker program is in effect, in addition to civil penalties and fines, result in debarment from the guest-worker program.

Except for seasonal work, the number of guest-workers permitted to enroll would be adjusted annually in responses to changes in the U.S. economic conditions, and specifically unemployment rates, on a region-by-region basis.

America's 12 Federal Reserve Districts will serve as regions in which employment needs are assessed annually by commissions composed of representatives from

Summer Antiques Show Comes to Southampton

The much anticipated Summer Antiques Show in Southampton will debut on Friday evening, July 27, from 6:00 to 9:00 with a Preview Party to benefit the League of Women Voters of the Hamptons. The Summer Antiques Show continues the proud tradition of being regarded as "The Best Antiques Show in the Hamptons" with a spectacular Twelfth Annual Antiques Show highlighting some of the more prominent exhibitors in the United States and Canada. In dramatic room setting booths, the international exhibitors will offer for sale the finest in American, European and Asian antiques, fine art, decorative objects, period furniture, estate jewelry, rugs, lighting, textiles and pillows, porcelains, silver and so much more. The Antiques Show will then continue to be open for general admissions throughout the day on Saturday, July 28 from 11:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. and Sunday, July 29 from 11:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Held in the Recreation Center of Southampton High School, 141 Narrow Lane in the Village of Southampton, the Summer Antiques Show offers an opportunity to view and purchase from many exhibitors who make this show their only appearance in the northeast. In a review of the antiques show from last season, titled "Southampton Antiques Show Remains One of the Best," the writer commented that the show was "elegant, tasteful, refined and sometimes grandiose" and that "trade was energetic for almost anything" in the show.

Hailing from Florida, Donald S. Bethune of Palm Beach will offer 18th and early 19th century English and Continental furniture, paintings, silver and porcelain. The Merchant Princess of Macon, Georgia will have textiles, upholstered furniture, pillows and early lighting, and Vintage Posters International of Chicago will be showing authentic European stone lithographic posters, c.1890-1950.

New to the prestigious antiques show this season are three prominent Connecticut antiques exhibitors. The Elemental Garden of Sharon will bring 18th, 19th and early 20th century English, French and American antique garden ornament and conservatory furnishings, while Julian Beck Fine Paintings of Washington will offer fine art from around the world for attendees. Period garden antiques, fine country antiques and decorative accessories will grace the booth of Passports, Salisbury, who recently wowed the audience at the prestigious Millbrook Antiques Show. From New York City are some new exhibitors who promise to bring an exciting array of wonderful antiques for the show. Eleanor and David Billet will have faux bamboo, painted furniture, paintings and garden antiques. Fine antiques, art and decorations are the mainstay for Cotter Kroboth, Ltd. and Dragon Culture will have Chinese antiques and furniture. Another newcomer to the 2001 Antiques Show is Running Battle Antiques of Millbrook who will create two lovely stands. The first will be filled to brimming with 17th and 18th century English oak furniture and fine English period accessories. Their second booth will highlight a wonderful collection of dramatic 19th century marine paintings. There will also be the finest estate jewelry, Oriental and decorative rugs, fine antique prints, pottery, chandeliers, china and glass, and more.

The Summer Antiques Show in Southampton Preview Party includes fine food and summer drinks from The Elegant Touch, early buying privileges and re-admission to the antiques show throughout the weekend. Tickets for the opening event are $25 in advance from the League of Women Voters of the Hamptons, (631)537-0120 or $30 at the door on Friday, July 27. Saturday and Sunday admission is $6. For further information contact Oliver and Gannon Associates, Inc. at (518) 861-5478, shows@albany.net or preview the show on the web at www.ShowsFairsFestivals.com.

Carmen at Villa Maria

During this, their tenth season, The Opera of the Hamptons has already given a tremendously well sung and acted performance of La Boheme at the Borghese Hargrave Vineyards, which could well have graced many of the main opera houses. On July 21 their next production will be 'Rigoletto' at the Pindar Winery in Peconic and this will then be followed by their bringing an international cast of singers and dancers to the beautiful grounds of the Villa Maria in Water Mill, where, on Sunday, August 5, they will stage a performance of one of the best loved operas of all time, Bizet's Carmen.

The tempestuous, sultry, exciting music of Carmen with its story of love, jealousy and ill fated attraction has made this opera and its derivatives such as "Carmen Jones" and various movie treatments such a success. Non-opera followers will almost certainly know the music of the famous 'Habanera' and 'Toreador' arias even if they do not recognize the names and it hard to imagine anyone not having their feet set tapping to the insistent beat of the music, which has delighted audiences around the world since its first performance back in 1875.

In the cast of Carmen will be the Argentine born tenor, Gustavo Antonio Ahualli who made such an impression in the role of Marcello in La Boheme. He will sing the role of the toreador, Escamillo, who sets out to steal Carmen, sung in this production by Anna Hurwitz, away from Don Jose, the young soldier she sets out to seduce. Joseph Addeo will be seen in the role of Don Jose and Barbara Giancola, the Artistic Director of the company, believes that both Anna and Joseph, who has been described as 'the quintessential romantic Italian tenor' will bring together that good chemistry which makes for extra special performances. Anna is due to make her debut as Carmen, one of the most demanding operatic roles, because she is on stage for virtually the whole time. Anna brings a background not only of operatic training but also one of classical and musical theater.

This will be the fifth annual fund raiser for the Sisters of St. Dominick who provide, in the true Dominican tradition, welcome and support for all who have need of their services of hospitality, prayer, study and mission. One of the main ministries at Villa Maria is the Siena Spirituality Center, which supports people of all backgrounds in the development of faith, spirituality, holistic living, inner integrity and sacred union with God, with each other and with nature.

This should be a great occasion to come and enjoy glorious music, beautifully sung, together with a chance to view the grounds and the recently refurbished house, which is truly one of the gems of the Hamptons, and at the same time make a donation to a very worthy cause. Tickets are $45 in advance and $55 at the gate and there will also be a Preferred seating, Cocktails and Dinner package for $175. Tickets and information can be obtained from the Opera of the Hamptons at (631) 728-8804 or from the Siena Spirituality Center at (631) 726-4740.

The Marriage Spirit

We live in a society afflicted by stress and constant pressure. Most people, without even realizing it, take out their deep frustrations on those they love, namely their spouses.

Marriage counselors Dr. Paul and Evelyn Moschetta warn that this contradicts the very premise of a healthy marriage. Evelyn and Paul, who practice in East Hampton, midtown Manhattan and Huntington, use their loving relationship as a model to help couples determine the root of their problems and work to remedy them.

This devoted couple, married twenty-seven years, have each been previously divorced and have experienced the intense emotional turmoil that accompanies this "total life adjustment," as Paul refers to it. They began their careers as marriage counselors to help couples realize that they can be soul mates, rather than just roommates. They express this thesis in their book The Marriage Spirit, which teaches couples that they need not simply live together to fulfill material needs, but can be best friends and have passion for one another for years to come.

Couples can and should be truly connected on an emotional level. Dr. Evelyn Moschetta is currently working on a follow up to The Marriage Spirit. It is a work in progress which Paul will contribute to when his wife has completed a first outline.

The husband and wife, who have both earned doctoral degrees in social work from Yeshiva University, counsel couples together as a team and individually. Similarly, couples are seen together and separately. The reason for this is that it is essential to first learn each spouse's personal history and determine whether or not he or she would feel comfortable discussing certain past experiences in front of his or her spouse. When asked what couples most commonly disagree about, Paul and Evelyn are in agreement that money, parenting, sex, and control issues are most frequently at the root of spousal problems.

Oftentimes competitiveness is present in a marriage, wherein one spouse is constantly trying to be "one up," as Evelyn puts it, on the other. Differences of opinion, competitiveness and a clash of needs lead to marital discontent, but it is a couple's failure to communicate and compromise that causes great stress in a relationship. Each partner must keep this in mind and should want what is best for his or spouse and for the marriage.

Paul and Evelyn hear the common complaint from couples: I love my husband/wife, but I'm not in love with him/her anymore. This is the point at which, Paul explains, spouses have become disconnected emotionally and are only meeting one another's custodial needs.

Many people work out religiously to maintain their physical health, but fail to put forth the amount of effort needed to maintain a healthy marriage. What people forget, Paul says, is that "the greatest contributor to health and well being is love; love is the best medicine." When this magical remedy is in jeopardy, people do not act quickly enough. Most couples, Evelyn concedes, "come in when the marriage is in intensive care." Both doctors agree that helping couples whose marriages are in "intensive care" to heal is the most rewarding aspect of their careers. Evelyn conveys how touched she is when one spouse offers a heartfelt apology to the other and when a person understands the pain of his or her partner. Evelyn is most satisfied when she is able to

ABOUT FACE with Annette Garkowski-Gunneke

ABOUT FACE: BASIC SKIN CARE 101

Your skin is the largest organ of your body. Remarkably, its surface cells are in a state of continual replacement as they are lost through wear. Not only does your skin protect you from the environment, it also helps regulate body temperature and helps with fluid and electrolyte balance. Another important function of your skin is to provide receptors for touch, pain and pressure. Though it has many layers, your skin can be divided into 3 main portions:

The epidermis-the outer portion containing skin cells, pigment and proteins.

The dermis-the middle portion containing blood vessels, nerves, hair follicles and oil glands:it provides nutrition to the epidermis.

The subcutaneous layer-this layer below the dermis contains sweat glands, some of the hair follicles, blood vessels and fat.

Each layer also contains connective tissue with collagen fibers for support, and elastin fibers for flexibility and strength.

Your Changing Skin

Changes in your skin are related to many factors, such as environment, genetic makeup, nutrition and others. Sun exposure is the greatest. For example, compare areas of your body that have regular sun exposure with areas that don't, natural pigments seem to provide some protection against sun-induced skin damage. People with blue eyes and fair skin show more aging skin changes than people with darker, more heavily pigmented skin.

Saving Your Skin

When it comes to skin care, basic is better. That's because the epidermis, the outer layer of skin, is made up of mainly of lifeless cells whose purpose is to protect the layers beneath from injury and to preserve moisture. So all the various creams, ointments and emollients can do only so much. Your main goal should be to help remove these cells as new ones rise to the surface.

A simple cleansing regimen:

Wash your face morning and night to remove dirt,

Wives Over The Border

Why is it when a man has a "mid-life" crises and runs off with his young secretary we assume it is normal, if not tragic, behavior? However, when a woman has a "mid-life" crises and takes off with her gorgeous personal trainer, she is labeled "Borderline"... the dreaded 21st century all purpose personality disorder. Did these women suddenly flip one day and become mentally imbalanced, or did their spouses drive them crazy?

No one "turns" Borderline. The dramatic, unstable behaviors characteristic of people with this disorder should be readily apparent to anyone having a relationship with them. Even if their wives were truly borderline, how could it come as such a surprise to these men, ten, fifteen, twenty years into their marriage?

As a Clinical Psychologist in private practice in Manhattan for over fifteen years, I have heard an alarming increase in complaints by men that their wives were "Borderline" implying: crazy, unfit for marriage and/or motherhood, unstable, hysterical, vengeful, out of control, or simply scary. I can almost hear men in the locker rooms, on golf courses or off sailing sharing this strange, new behavior observed in their wives and wondering what has caused them to become wanton, spiteful, uncontrollable. Psychotherapists have become the new Clerics these husbands turn to exorcise the "borderline" demon.

What do these personal trainers have that bewitched these "borderline" wives into acting in such lustful ways? Youth, attentiveness, adoration, great bodies? Same attributes that young, attentive, adoring, secretaries have that drive their bosses "crazy." What makes one behavior pathological and the other normal?

Powerful, economically independent, mature women are beginning to attract and be attracted to the same sexual trophies as their husbands. Notice the growing number of women, bumping up against menopause, who are motivated to have that one last romantic fling. Does it make this morally right? No. But it does even the power differential. This becomes a sociological problem. Labeling one group "crazy" is a guaranteed way of ensuring their "less than" status in society. Older men who act out sexually are labeled virile, older women who act out sexually are labeled "borderline."

The above does not negate the sad fact that there are women who actually have Borderline Personality Disorders. Are here Borderline Wives out there? Definitely, yes. However, I wonder how a man could marry someone so unstable to begin with, have children with them, try to build a life with them and then wake up one day and realize, "My God, my wife is out of her mind!" Denial is a powerful thing. Those crazy moods and dramatic episodes that might have been sexy and exciting when one is young enough and energetic enough to keep up with them can eventually ruin a marriage and destroy a family. My heart goes out to anyone trying to untie the knots of a marriage with a wife who is angry, frightened women who suffer from genuine Borderline Personality Disorders where abandonment often triggers out of control fear, panic and desperate behaviors.

In short, there appears to be a trend by the males in our society toward over-labeling female behavior as "borderline" when:

Their wives have affairs with younger, adoring men. Their wives go berserk when they find their husbands are having affairs with younger, adoring women.

Their wives are threatened with divorce, economic hardship, and abandonment and respond with panic and anger.

A woman actually does have a borderline personality disorder. (And in this case a man should stop and ask himself how he got involved with someone so physically hurt and unstable.)

The next time you hear some man complain about his borderline wife, ex-wife, or girlfriend, you might ask him to "diagnose" his own behavior using the same criteria. Could it be that "What's good for the gander is good for the goose?"

—Alita Buzel, PhD.

aid in the sweeping away of deep seated anger and hurt in a marriage. This sense of accomplishment is even greater when children are involved. Paul adds that most parents are more than willing to give their children anything and everything in terms of material desires. However, a loving marriage is the greatest gift a couple can give to their children.

I asked the doctors if counseling is beneficial for all couples, even if not yet married. Evelyn explains that pre-marriage couples who are doing well don't necessarily need counseling, but should take a pre-marital class or course, so that when tough times do come they know how to handle them. If an unmarried couple are having difficulty communicating, counseling would certainly be positive. As for married couples, if it seems as if the passion in the relationship is fading, it is essential to seek therapy early as a preventative method.

employers, labor unions and the federal government in that region. The program will recognize that the current 15.3% payroll tax paid by illegal aliens and their employers produced no benefits for the illegal workers.

Under the new guest-worker program, the 15.3% payroll tax will be used first to fund emergency medical care for the guest-worker. The bulk of the payroll deduction will go into and IRA account that will be owned by the individual worker and which can be withdrawn when the worker leaves the program and returns to Mexico. While other countries will ultimately wish to participate in the program, the first effort at operating a guest-worker program will be the responsibility of the U.S. and Mexico. Participating in the guest-worker program will not lead to permanent residency status. Participants will be required to return to their home country when their permit expires. After their return, they can apply through normal channels and on an equal footing with their fellow citizens for immigration into the U.S.

POLICE BLOTTER

Flag thefts continue unabated this summer, especially in Montauk, where five flags were removed from a flagpole. The flags were an eclectic mix: the New York State flag, the Montauk flag, the sea tow flag and a decorative (as the police reports reads) red lobster flag.

But the big story in Montauk had to be two boys from the hood in Queens (Rosedale, Queens, to be specific), who tried to pull off a robbery at Cyril's Fish House on the Napeague Strip. A nineteen year old youth, who had been a former employee at Cyril's, burst in one morning, threatened the bookkeeper, then struck her with a pistol. Cyril himself, who was outside, ran inside, tackled the robber. The youth fled in a getaway car, an Infiniti, driven by a thirty-six year old man (who happens to be engaged to the youth's mother).

The pair were not able to get far. Police set up a roadblock in front of Brent's in Amagansett. And with traffic being what it is...by the time the thieves got there the authorities were waiting.

Why don't we eat here? Seemed to be the theme one morning in front of the North Fork Bank in East Hampton. An employee there called the police to report that there were two people in beach chairs in front of the bank, eating their breakfasts. But when police arrived, the breakfasting pair was gone. It is not known if the police searched the town for individuals bearing beach chairs.

His mother told him he'd get in trouble doing that. In Montauk a man in a red sedan stopped at an intersection and pointed what appeared to be a hand pistol at two pedestrians. Then he fired three shots. The pedestrians, unhurt, was certainly shook up as the sniper drove away. Police tracked down the gunman, who was held up at the Driftwood Motel. He was in possession of nothing more lethal than a cap gun. He was placed in custody and charged with menacing.

Dear Dan,

We here on the "North Fork" are not maybe so sophisticated as you there on the "South Fork," but I feel I must comment on the seemingly "menage á trois" scene depicted on page 26 in the supplement South of the Highway. I'm greatly disappointed in what I thought was your family style magazine.

SAVE THE WOODS

Dear Dan,

I have lived at 19 Timber Lane for seven years and have taken great pleasure in being an East Hampton resident. Last year was the first year Northwest Woods was hit by caterpillars that ate and destroyed our trees. Since that was the first year, although devastating for our trees. Since that was the first year, although devastating for our trees, I had hoped that all would be fine this year. Unfortunately, this is not the case. Once again this year the entire Northwest Woods is being devastated by these caterpillars and the town apparently is doing nothing about it.

We are losing all the trees that have made this part of East Hampton marvelous. Walking down to Northwest Harbor along Mill Hill Road and Northwest Road one could feel the devastation to be apocalyptic by the sight of eaten trees, worms hanging from the branches and the black bags the caterpillars have created on the trees. The damage is not only limited to the destruction of the area's natural beauty but has created a revolting spectacle.

I am sure that getting rid of these worms is not an easy job, but I don't see or hear of any measures at all being taken to save the woods. It is obvious to all of us that money is not the problem, as the town in its wisdom has decided to repave all the sidewalks and streets during the summer season.

However, funds could also and must be put into saving the natural beauty of the town's trees without which I am afraid all other enhancement would become futile.

I would like your opinion and update as to what is being done about this problem.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

dead skin cells excess oil (if any) and makeup.

For normal skin, water and a mild, neutral (transparent type) soap is fine.

Oily skin requires a stronger soap or a rinsable cleanser specifically for oily skin.

Dry skin responds to a rinsable cleanser not soap. Avoid heavy creams that must be wiped off. Not only do they not remove dirt and dead cells, they can leave the skin dull.

Be mindful of makeup

Sunscreen or a foundation with sunscreen should be used under makeup.

Your makeup should suit your skin type

If your skin is normal, you can use almost any kind of makeup.

If your skin is oily, try using a mild astringent first, then sunscreen and an oil-free, water-based makeup.

If your skin is dry, use a moisturizer first and an oil-based makeup.

Eradicate Free Radicals

These pesky little particles, subatomic in size, attack your skin's cells and hasten the onset of wrinkles. Most come from the sun. However, smoking caffeine, alcohol and stress can also take their toll. Again, the use of sunscreen will help. But you can also help your body eradicate free radicals by making sure certain vitamins, minerals and amino acids called antioxidants, are part of your diet.

They include:

Vitamins A, Beta-Carotene, B-Complex, C and E. Minerals Zinc and Selenium Amino Acids L-Cysteine and Glutathione Supplements containing these antioxidants can be found at your local health food store, nutrition center or pharmacy.

About Sunscreens

When used properly, sunscreens protect your skin from harmful ultraviolet (UV) rays.

Sunscreens are rated for their protection ability. Look for high SPF (sun protection factor) numbers. The higher the number, the greater the protection.

Choose the SPF number based on your skin type and the length of time you expect to be in the sun.

Apply sunscreen liberally and frequently. Re-apply sunscreen after swimming.

Remember that UV rays can penetrate some types of fabric, so wear sunscreen under your clothes.

Wherever Plants Grow In Soil!!!

Give your landscape a treat. Ten years of research and development is now available for your property and farm. You now have an option for beautiful landscapes and farms without the use of soil destroying fertilizers and toxic chemicals.
Organics by neglect is no longer necessary. These Organic products produce the healthiest soil for the healthiest plants that will repel pests and disease. My organic methods are the best for your soils.

HOMES FOR SALE

At last, the real answer to today's Real Estate Market.

In a field rampant with distrust, misinformation and confusion, where broker's are playing games with their client's heads, misleading the buyer about zoning and the true cost of improvements, and ethics are a joke - now comes the answer long ago discovered in Florida. The concept of a Buyer's Broker.

FitzSimmons Real Estate is the ideal brand name for today. Headed by a graduate of Harvard Business School, a certified appraiser trained in the analytical approach to value, he has taught Real Estate law, ethics, zoning, sub-division regulation finance and negotiation.

His associate is an established quality builder and the office is staffed with adults who find you property of justifiable value. The contractual cost of this service is probably nothing since the negotiation is net and the fees are covered by the commission spread. A retainer is required and liability is nonexistent.
